HUNDREDS DEAD IN BATTLE

HEADLESS WOMAN ON BEACH

HAMPTON BEACH, N. H., Nov. 11.—The headless body of a woman was found by a beach patrol from the lifesaving station here, washed up by the surf. Every effort to identify the body has failed.

The body was that of a woman above medium height. The clothing was serviceable and good, but not of fine quality. In one stocking the woman had a snuff box which contained a quantity of snuff turned to paste by the water, and a pocketbook containing a $2 bill, $2.30 in silver and a small key that might fit a trunk or box.

The lifesavers, who discovered the body at 11 p. m. yesterday, notified Medical Examiner Sherborn of Portsmouth. After examining the body, Dr. Sherborn sent it to an undertaking establishment in Hampton to be prepared for burial.

Dr. Sherborn found that death had been due to drowning. The body had evidently been in the water for about a month. The head and hands were gone.

Captain Smart of the lifesaving station said: "The only hope of identification lies in some person recognizing the clothing. Our men found the body on the beach. It is fair to assume that it was brought down the Merrimac River by the current and carried out to sea. The southeast gale of the last few days would drive it ashore. There were no signs to indicate violence."

HELEN HUNTINGTON, FUTURE MRS. ASTOR.

This Beautiful Photograph of Vincent Astor's Bride-to-Be Is a Perfect Likeness of the Blue-Eyed Girl Who Will Complete the Trio of "Mrs. Astors" and Who Will Wield a Sceptre of Gold.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Society returning to town this week found ready made for their gossip a topic of enthralling interest. It was:

"Which one of the three Mrs. Astors will rule society next Winter?" The question was raised by the announcement of Vincent Astor's engagement to Helen Dinsmore Huntington.

There will be Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, first wife of John Jacob Astor. She has from his estate and her own family an income of $100,000 a year, and she had wide social experience, and is gifted with all the arts of winning and holding social supremacy. She began her campaign at Newport last Summer, and was recognized as a leader there.

There will be Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, widow of John Jacob Astor. This Mrs. Astor's infant son has a $3,000,000 estate and she herself received $5,000,000, the family income, and the New York home, to be hers until she marries again. She is a mere girl, not comparable with Mrs. Ava Willing Astor in social experience, but with the charm of youth to help her fight for social supremacy. She spent last Summer at Bar Harbor and made no attempt to join in social life.

And there will be Mrs. Vincent Astor —now Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington. They will be married in the Spring. Mrs. Vincent Astor will have behind her her husband's estate of close to $100,000,000. If she cares for social warfare she should win. But she is said to prefer a quiet life in the country and to have accepted Vincent Astor's wooing only on condition that he live in the country—probably at Ferncliff, his estate at Rhinebeck-on-Hudson.

At any rate, New York is fluttering with excitement to know what will come of the war of the three Mrs. Astors. Next Winter is expected to see a social battle royal—where the combatants will meet with gracious smiles.

The officials declined to give the information. Today, after the company was forced to show books so that the call might be traced, it was found that the records were indecipherable.

SENSATION IN SUIT BY WIFE

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 11.—Sensational testimony of his acquaintance with Miss Mabel Cochrane, a pretty Boston girl, was given today by Lieutenant-Commander James Wilson Grimes Walker, formerly a civil engineer in the United States Navy, in the suit for separate support brought against him by his wife, Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker.

The lieutenant-commander told how he had first met Miss Cochrane when she was a cashier in the North Station in Boston and of how his wife had strenuously objected to his keeping the girl's picture on his bureau. His testimony was the second sensation in the trial, the first coming in the introduction of amazing letters alleged to have been written to him by Miss Cochrane.

Walker also testified that his wife informed him after the birth of their last child that if any more children were born to her she would leave him. This was when they lived in Brookline, Mass.

Walker stated that he used to take his meals in the North Station lunch room while he worked at the Charlestown Navy Yard. At that time he had an income of $3,000 a year.

"One day when I paid my lunch check," said Walker, "I pulled out a large roll of bills from my pocket. I had just been paid off. A few days later while walking near Scollay square the cashier asked me if I would not like to help furnish a flat for her."

Sent Girl's Photograph Back.

Walker testified that Miss Cochrane at one time gave him her photograph. He took it home and placed it on his bureau. Mrs. Walker objected strenuously to the photograph and he returned it to Miss Cochrane. He denied that notes had been left under his plate in the lunch room, as had been testified to by other witnesses.

He remembered an instance while in Washington he took Miss Cochrane to the Zoo. Mrs. Walker was not with them at the time.

My dear Mr. Walker: I told you I would want to hear from you be-

—Secretary Garrison.

"The forts at the Atlantic entrance are so placed as to sweep the sea for sixteen miles," he said, "while the big guns to be mounted on the islands of Perico, Naos and Flamenco, at the Pacific end, could destroy any foreign fleet before the ships could approach near enough to the forts to assail them."

TANGO SLAYER IS DRAGGED TO TRIAL BY FORCE

WHEATON, Ill., Nov. 11.—Henry Spencer, the confessed murderer of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexford today refused to leave his cell to go to court for his trial. When he was finally started to the courthouse he would not submit to being handcuffed to a deputy until he had been threatened with force.

"They can pull off that fake just as well without me," insisted the prisoner. "When they get ready to turn in a verdict I will be there, but it doesn't get me anything to hear all the talk about the churches these fellows attend and how old they are, and whether they would hang an insane man.

"Some one said that genius was the twin sister of insanity, and he was a wizard. I am a genius in my line.

If I'd used ordinary care I could have killed off half the population before I was fifty years old. The only trouble with me was I had too contempt for the police. Like anything else a man must learn to kill by experience. A beginner is almost certain to spread finger prints where they will do the most harm, but after a few tries a man with brains learns to stand clear."

Anton Zelanm, the attorney defending Spencer, has five expert medical witness by whose testimony he hopes to prove that his client is a lunatic of a violent type.

She stays to answer any questions which may be asked by the authorities.

Edgar F. Duprey, town solicitor of Ipswich, is Mrs. Hayes' counsel. Chief of Police Hull and State Officer Wells, according to the former's statement, plan today a number of experiments at the scene of the shooting.

Although Mrs. Hayes was discharged by Judge Sayward when she was arraigned in Ipswich Saturday, she welcomes the investigation, which she hopes will establish her story beyond any doubt.

At the funeral of her husband, held from the home of his aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Smith E. Hayes, Ipswich, the tears welled to the widow's eyes as the quartet sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The dual prayer of the minister found her sobbing as if her heart was breaking.

SECRECY BEST AT RUTLAND, SAYS RANDALL

Acting upon the protest from Representatives Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester and his brother, Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston, against the refusal of the State Prison Commission to give them a public hearing on their charges of cruelty to sick prisoners at the Rutland prison camp, Governor Foss today demanded an explanation from Chairman Randall of the prison board.

Chairman Randall said: "I believe in publicity as a rule. The public has a right to know how our business is being conducted. But there are always exceptions. There are many feeble-minded prisoners at Rutland camp and some of these are bordering on insanity. To give any unnecessary publicity to charges made against the attendants would tend to excite these prisoners and might do much harm. I felt in this case that the commission would accomplish more good by keeping the matter out of the limelight. The commission is making a thorough investigation of the charges and they will file its report as soon as it is completed."

The Fitting Value of
Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets
Is Not Excelled, and They Are Priced Moderately

Corset Section
Main Store
Fourth Floor

There is a charm in simplicity that is to every woman, appealing, whatever her age.

The Gowns this Autumn really owe their full expression of beauty—and they are beautiful, regardless of a few eccentricities—to the perfect contour of the corset.

Of course there is a difference, since the corset, through its boning, does not lose its shape, the figure always "taking on" the corset shape, whereas the glove stretches to the shape of the hand.

WARNER'S CORSETS have demonstrated their goodness season after season and are particularly in demand at the present time.

A WARNER CORSET gives more than a fashionable figure, it is a health-sustaining garment, so scientifically made that it supports even when most lightly boned and when it is shaping the most extreme figure.

We can recommend WARNER'S CORSETS, as each model is found to fit every woman, young or matronly, giving an easy naturalness to the figure.

Even the strongest corset---the most heavily boned---is only felt for its perfect support. Moreover, a Warner truly will wear as long as you want it to, and that is saying much.

If you like you can have a

Warner's Rust-Proof Corset

Lightly boned---practically boneless models---or a more firmly boned model; all as low in the bust and as long in the skirt as your fancy dictates, or your figure permits.

EVERY WARNER, regardless of the price you pay, shapes fashionably and comfortably—a Warner cannot rust, break or tear, 1.00 to 3.00.

OUR CORSET GUARANTEE—We Guarantee Without Any Restrictions the Satisfactory Service of Every Corset We Sell—The Length of Time That a Corset Should Wear Being Left Entirely to the Wearer's Judgment.

FIGHT EXECUTION OF WOMAN

Boston to Lift Ringing Cry Against Barbarism at Faneuil Hall Meeting.

Bostonians will crowd Faneuil Hall Saturday night for the giant meeting to protest against the hanging of Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, the Connecticut woman who has been sentenced to death for killing her husband.

New England has been swept by a wave of indignation. There are thousands who believe the woman innocent. There are hundreds of thousands and millions who will fight to the end to prevent her execution—who believe it would be an endless stain on New England if the Mary Rogers horror were visited.

The Prison Reform Association and the Anti-Death Penalty League are united in planning the meeting. Some of the most prominent men in Boston will speak. The Rev. William H. Van Allen, James H. Vahey, H. H. Patten, the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, Joseph Santosuosso, and Herbert L. Baker will be among them. Spooner, head of the Anti-Death Penalty League, will also speak. The clergymen of Boston are solidly behind the protest. After the speeches, there will be an open discussion.

Mrs. Spooner, who for years has been a picturesque figure in the fight to abolish the death penalty, says:

"Every woman in Boston should come to this mass meeting. It will be a lasting shame if Mrs. Wakefield is executed.

"Once more we shall strain every effort to enlist public sentiment against the death penalty, and especially against the hanging of a woman. Capital punishment is bound to go, and this is the time we should abolish it.

"No time could be more opportune for the women of New England to make their influence felt.

"A vigorous and continued protest will win in the end. Must we have the gruesome details of executions—legal murders—served up to us year after year indefinitely? It must end, and now is the time."

The mass meeting Saturday night will be under the auspices of the League of which Mrs. Spooner is president. The plan is to adopt resolutions to be forwarded to Governor Baldwin of Connecticut. Mrs. Wakefield is sentenced to die on March 4.

Mrs. Wakefield is the mother of two children. Again and again during the trial and since, she has protested her innocence of the charge against her. And her old mother has voiced a piteous plea—"Don't let them kill my girl," that has roused a storm of protest.

JUDGE THREATENED WITH DEATH IF MRS. WAKEFIELD IS HANGED

WATERBURY, Ct., Nov. 11.—Judge Lucien F. Burpee of the Superior Court, who sentenced Mrs. Bessie Wakefield to death for the murder of her husband, has received a letter threatening him with death if she is hanged.

Judge Burpee declared that he did not fear the threat, and that he did not consider the matter of enough importance to turn it over to the police.

He is receiving hundreds of letters daily requesting him to use his influence to obtain a pardon for the condemned woman.

Attorney Thomas Devine will appeal for a new trial for Mrs. Wakefield, on the ground that for fully six weeks she was harrassed by State detectives, and that she talked freely to the coroner about the case when he had not disclosed his official character and that she had neither friend nor counsel to advise her.

Unless, however, the friends of Mrs. Wakefield come to her aid with funds sufficient to carry her case to the Supreme Court, she will be unable to carry her case higher, if Judge Lucien F. Burpee should refuse her petition for an appeal.

If the appeal is allowed by the court the State will pay the expenses, but if not, Mrs. Wakefield would be compelled to furnish the funds, and Mr. Devine declares she is penniless.

It was eight weeks after her arrest before the woman was permitted to have counsel, was another of Mr. Devine's statements. In the meantime, he says, Coroner Mix had secured her confession and a grand jury brought in an indictment.

In all there are twelve reasons given by Mr. Devine in his petition for appeal. They are based on exceptions to the testimony, chiefly the testimony of Coroner Mix concerning the statements of the woman to him before he had disclosed to her his identity and warned her of her legal rights. This is the main contention, the others being based on alleged errors in the judge's charge to the jury. Mr. Devine believes the evidence of the coroner did much to fix the degree of the crime.

MRS. BELMONT CRIES AGAINST INJUSTICE OF VERDICT BY MEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has issued a remarkable statement discussing the case of Mrs. Bessie Wakefield—under sentence to hang—and protesting against the execution of the woman. Mrs. Belmont says in part:

"A woman is sentenced to be hanged in Connecticut. The verdict is rendered by a jury of men. The judge is a man, the lawyers are men. The laws are man made. Therefore, we have decided view of the question of justice. No woman has been consulted, yet we are dealing entirely with woman nature—a woman's life.

"Can you imagine any man standing in a law court being judged by laws made and enacted by women—facing a woman judge, a jury of women, his case handled by women lawyers? Do you know any man who would stand for such injustice? Would he not have a right to say, 'You cannot judge or sentence me. You do not know me or my nature, my impulses, my rights?' Yet this woman stands just that position.

"Do you wonder that suffragists are asking for the vote, for equal recognition in all lines of life, the same as men? This woman's mother knows, as my opinions I have seen, has struck the keynote of the situation. She says: 'The lover had a terrible power over her. Both men had threatened to kill her, and when them her life was a terror.' She knew the tortured life her child was leading, between two men; rendered desperate, she choose, in her ignorance helplessness, the only way out of it—that is, to get rid of one of the torturers; and the lover will do the deed.

"See a man is the same position. What does he do to get rid of his wife and children in his way with another woman? He leaves them. He departs with the other woman and has his way. Now, why did not this Connecticut woman go her way with this new man who came somehow or other into her life? This is the whole point, for now we have the woman nature. The maternal instinct, the sense of duty to the helpless that comes into the consciousness of every woman for her children. Her human nature—you know so many excuses for man's human nature when the sex question is involved—her animal nature—and, remember, we are dealing with a poor, illiterate creature—her animal nature, I say, will govern her at times, poor thing. She could have gone with the new man. She could have left her brood uncared for. But, you see, the woman nature governed her and she stayed and let the other man rid her of the brutality of a double prostitution."

French Adonis Left Clad in a Hat Only

PARIS, Nov. 11.—M. Pierre Pradeau, a young actor who succeeded Mme. Bernhardt in the title role of "L'Aiglon," was required to do his term of military service. When summoned by the examining board and ordered to strip he seemed embarrassed. The only aid he had to shield his modesty was a tall hat.

To add to his distress one of the other conscripts made off with his underwear. He found no sympathy from the gendarmes to whom he complained.

Freak Fashion Now for the Toy Dogs

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The freak fashions are going to the "pomeranian bow-wows." This was proved at the Kennel Club show at the Crystal Palace.

The stranger, even the more hideous, the toy dog's appearance the better. The freak dog's owner cuts tufts of hair from its head to add to its bizarre looks. Of course, the last word in doginess is for a woman to carry a toy dog whose color matches her dress.

Love Wager Costly; Doctor Gets Stakes

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., Nov. 11.—James Quinn and Harold Dunn wagered $5 yesterday that each possessed the love of Seraphino Desbraugh. Percy St. Clair was made stakeholder. The fair Seraphino turned her back on both Quinn and Dunn. St. Clair kept the $10, and Dunn struck him with a cudgelarm.

St. Clair and Dunn were arrested and each fined $20. St. Clair had to use the $10 to pay a doctor for sewing up his scalp.

INDIAN NECK, Va., Nov. 11.—Theodore Roosevelt has been appealed to by Mrs. Anna Barrett, colored, of Indian Neck, for aid for her family of nine children. Her letter will be forwarded to him in South America. She writes:

"Circumstances force me to appeal to you asking you to assist me in some way to provide for my babies. I had twins three and a half years ago. Seventeen months afterwards I gave birth to triplets, namely Mary, Martha and Elizabeth.

"My husband is a poor farmer and not able to hire help. My oldest child is eight and I have to keep her from school to help me. Please, for Heaven sake, if in any way you can help me it will be appreciated."

Mrs. Belmont Calls Comstock a Fossil

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and gloss to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is tiresome and troublesome. Now you simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

AMERICAN GIRL EDITOR BURIED UNDER PHOTOS

Photographs continue to pour in on the typical American girl editor. Something has stirred the New England girls to enter the contest, and the three judges who have kindly offered to serve in selecting the favorite begin to realize the task before them.

The comment on New England girls made by the Harvard student signing himself "Dixie," who maintains that the true types of American womanhood are to be found in the South alone, has aroused the pride of Boston women and there is an evident desire to show the skeptic from Dixie that if he has not found the Boston girls comparing favorably with those from Virginia it is because of his narrow horizon and limited acquaintance.

One who would answer the youth who worships at the shrine of southern beauty writes as follows:

"We not only have as handsome and beautiful girls in New England as anywhere in the United States, but we have good looks mixed with remarkable capability, and the photographs coming in to the Boston AMERICAN ought to show such superiority."

The contest is by no means near an end and there is yet opportunity for every true American girl to send in her picture, that the honor of New England be vindicated.

More Worry for the Poor Farmer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Two destructive caterpillars that feed on ferns and flowers are described in a report today by the Bureau of Entomology. One comes from Florida and has appeared in Illinois and Ohio. It thrives in ferns, cutting up the plant and destroying the young fronds. The other destroys roses and young trees and is a "slug-like" caterpillar with a "sting." The bureau advises spraying with paris green or arsenate of lead.

Miss Marie Tempest Stricken on Stage

Famous English Actress Recovering but Is Still Weak.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Miss Marie Tempest, the actress, who is favorably known throughout America, and who was stricken on the stage in the performance of "Mary Goes First," is still very weak and unable to appear in the production. Her part is being taken by an understudy. It is thought that she may be able to return to the stage within a week or so.

The last time Miss Tempest, who is the wife of Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, and who recently tried to secure a divorce from him, appeared in the United States, she played the part of Becky Sharp in "Vanity Fair," a dramatization by Robert Hitchens and her husband.

Mrs. Jack Gardner Buys Slade Painting

Purchases Scene of Etaples, France, for Large Sum.

Mrs. Jack Gardner has purchased at the Copley Hall exhibit of C. Arnold Slade of Paris, one of that artist's favorite Normandy paintings, entitled "Village of Etaples, France." The price was not announced, but it is understood to be large.

The painting portrays a coast scene in Normandy, the home of the artist, and for that reason is one which he feels represents some of his best work. It portrays also a part of France in which Mrs. Gardner has spent much time and of which she is especially fond.

STORAGE ABUSE KEEPS EGGS UP SAYS CASSIDY

With eggs at sixty-five cents a dozen in the up-town stores people are asking where this exorbitant rise in price is going to stop. The country is in the grip of the egg speculators. It is helpless. Mr. Cassidy tells you today why eggs have gone soaring in price.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

[How long is the American public going to stand for being mulcted yearly for exorbitant profits in eggs by egg speculators?

When will the people arise in their might and force Congress to pass a law forbidding speculation in the necessaries of life?

Today, though Greater Boston eggs are selling for sixty-five cents a dozen. Everything predicts their going still higher. Only yesterday came reports of a snow storm in Ohio, with predictions for cooler weather in New England.

Egg speculators, already gloating over their excessive profits, must be rubbing their hands in glee. Cold weather means egg production locally will decrease. Then COMES the deluge.

Warehouses throughout the country are heaped high with eggs put in storage last April. At that time the speculators and meat packers boarded 3,902,000 cases, or 117,000,000 dozen of eggs.

They paid at an average of eighteen to twenty cents a dozen for them. The cost of carrying them until now adds about 2 cents a dozen, making the total cost from twenty to twenty-two cents.

Profits of $11,000,000.

Today the speculators are asking thirty cents a dozen, allowing an approximate average cost of twenty-one cents, the profit totals nine times 117,000,000 dozen, or nearly eleven millions.

To such a pass have prices come that no ordinary wholesaler is trying to supply his trade with fresh westerns to keep the prices down so he can hold his trade.

Nearly housewives are casting the retailer from fifty cents to fifty-six cents. Even at sixty to sixty-five cents a dozen, the breakage, of one or two eggs a dozen means good bye to his profits.

On some consignments which have come last within the last few weeks profits of fully $600 to the car have been made. One operator disposed of several cars at a profit of $600 each, and, selling in the West, is retailing some fancy Michigan varieties with the hope that he can clear up $1,000 a car on them.

It is said that one New York firm of wholesale dry goods distributes its eggs not long ago which invested $650,000. That would mean trade in white and black, at $1.05

KERN CALLS 'CONFERENCE' ON CURRENCY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Kern, Democratic leader, today sent a formal call to Democratic Senators to meet at 2 o'clock tomorrow "to consult and advise" on the currency bill.

"Resolutions adopted will not be binding," added the Senator; "that is not the purpose of this conference. This is a question of whether something shall be done or not. We cannot go into the Senate on this bill like an unorganized mob; if we are to pass a bill we must be organized, as when we passed the tariff bill."

KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES DISAPPEAR

Chronic Sufferers Always Find Relief From Few Doses.

If you are bothered with backache—or rheumatism, have disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders to contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from weak kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon.

It is a positive fact that Croxone promptly overcomes such disorders.

It soaks right in, cleans out the stopped-up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate, long standing cases.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package costs but a trifle, and any druggist is authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time.

LOVE NOTE SAYS GIRL DREAMED ABOUT WALKER

fore I could decide what to do. I had a letter from him a few days ago. He told me he was under the impression that you would turn down there. But he thinks I ought to stay with Clara. But that would not interfere with me. For you know dear, that I love only you and I would do most anything for you. But to tell you the truth I feel a little nervous about going down. Have you been reading about Nan Patterson? I would not want anything like that to happen to me. Well, darling, it is a long time since I have been loved, and I think I could almost kill you with kindness. Oh, if you were only here in Boston.

"Not Much Sense In Going."

"I really do not see much sense in my going down there for a few months. I will certainly have to come home when Maude gets here, which will be some time in March or April. Now it is impartial with me whether I go South or stay in Boston, but I must decide this, for the month is up here and I must get out right away. If I stay I must take a furnished room, for trying to keep house for two of us is too much of a proposition. Your old friend Lillian is sick in bed, and I go over to Somerville every day to stay three or four hours with her. She wants me to stay with her altogether.

Have you dreamed of me lately? I dreamed of you last night. That is why I am writing you tonight. Well, I am still true to you. But I feel pretty nervous some times and I wish you were with me. I never used to feel that way. Have you heard the new song? "I wants to tell you, Babe, how much I love you." It is very pretty. I would sing it to you tonight if I only had you here. Well, I hope you are as true to me as I am to you. Well, it is a shame to tease you so. But this is just the way I feel. I must go to bed now to see if I can have another dream like last night. Write to me as soon as you receive this and let me know what you think in regard to my plans. I am not asking you for advice this time. If you can't let me have an answer this week I shall thank you very much. Yours, as ever,

Another letter read:

Didn't Want to Quarrel.

My Dear Mr. Walker—Yours of the 10th received. You are entirely mistaken if you think I am trying to start a quarrel with you. If I never answered some of your letters I guess I had good reason for not doing so. I have taken a flat with five rooms up on Bower street, near Humboldt avenue, I moved last week and have been very busy ever since my arrival in Boston. My two sisters have no idea of getting married right away. So I shan't encourage them any. Maud expects to go on the road next Winter.

I had a letter from Jack yesterday. He said that the cook had just been over to the office to find out if I intended to go back, as she used to be rather discouraged. I think I had better write her a note to encourage her a little or she may not stay. It seems to me it depends upon Mrs. W. as to when you start for Charleston. I thought it was business that detained you so long. I put up with a great many insults for that one week, but I stood it all for your sake. Now I am sorry that I did not act differently. Every time I think of how Mrs. W. treated me, my blood just boils. If I should ever by any chance happen to meet her I will know just how to treat her, too. I hope you will excuse me for writing just what I think, but I cannot help it, and I never will forget the way she treated me.

I met Mr. Buckley last night on Tremont street and he said he would give me a place any time. I was tempted to accept it, but think I had forgotten how to work. I was up river all day Sunday and got all sunburnt. There is no place like Boston after all. I feel like a different person altogether and we are having delightful weather. I know the blot I have just put all over the front of this. I would copy it, but it is my last piece of paper. It is now 9:30 and I want to take a walk down street and mail this letter before bed time. This is one of the days that I have the blues even if I am in Boston. But if I happen to meet my friends down street I guess I shall cheer up.

MABEL.

Good night.

Had Visited Walkers.

The testimony in behalf of Mrs. Walker was completed with these letters.

The first witness called for Lieutenant Walker was Mrs. Helen L. Kellogg of Pittsfield, who said that she had visited the Walkers at Newport, and that one time she visited the Admiral Walkers in Washington for several weeks, and one day took a walk with Miss Cochrane, whom she said Mr. Walker treated just civily.

John E. W. Cochrane, twenty-eight, a draughtsman in Washington and a brother of Mabel Cochrane, said he went to Charleston, S. C., in August, 1902, and took his sister with him and remained there some weeks. Occupied room on west side of the house; Mr. Walker's room was on northeast, his sister's on the southeast.

"My room was across the hallway," he said.

"My sister went to Charleston again in the Summer of 1903. Sister had a room facing east and next to that on the rear side of the hall was Mr. Walker's room."

"Did the rooms occupied by your sister and Mr. Walker connect," was asked by Attorney Harvey.

"Well, if they did I didn't know it."

Lieutenant Walker himself was the last witness of the day when the court closed and had just begun his testimony. He said that he was forty-five years old and a son of the late Rear Admiral John G. Walker, U. S. N. That he was married in April of 1897 in Washington. That about his first employment was with a railroad in St. Louis. That when his office was abolished he went to Atlantic City with his wife and lived with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Virginia Chinn, for a time.

Investigate Three Cambridge Fires

The police are investigating three fires in the six-family apartment house at No. 102 Trowbridge street, Cambridge. The first was in the apartment occupied by Frederick McKenzie. Mrs. Walter H. Nichols, who lives on the second floor and who was ill in bed, was rescued by her nurse. Later the curtains in the apartment of Alvah Richmond, on the first floor, were found ablaze. Several burned matches were found by the fireplace. At 5:30 p. m. pillows and clothing in a closet in the Richmond apartment were found on fire.

Another Atlantic Bank Dividend

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11.—A third dividend of 12½ per cent. will be paid to depositors of the Atlantic National Bank, which closed its doors last April. Edward P. Metcalf, its former president, is now under several indictments alleging misapplication of more than $200,000 of the bank's funds. This will make a total of 50 per cent. paid to depositors since the bank suspended.

WOMAN DONS BLOOMERS TO PAINT CHURCH

Wearing bloomers, a man's coat and a white felt hat, Miss Edith M. Northrop wielded a paint brush today upon the north side of the Sunnyside House, a Christian mission station, at No. 42 Crescent street, Waltham.

Near her, holding a giant can of paint, standing on a thirty-foot ladder, was Mrs. E. P. Worth, superintendent of the mission, with her calico wrapper tucked up around the bottom.

The church is two and a half stories high. Every inch of the painting will be done by Miss Northrop, even to the pointing and painting of the blinds.

A number of spectators cheered Miss Northrop and said that she was doing the work well and offered to help her. To all kind offers of help Miss Northrop replied:

"I began this work early this morning and I'm going to finish the front of the house before sundown.

"Women can help themselves when they want to do anything. If you ask a painter to come and paint your house you've got to wait till they get ready. Now I just went to work, and I can show those painters around here that I can paint as well as they can.

"Mrs. Worth and I will paint the barn after we get through with the house, and we are going to turn it into a gymnasium for the benefit of the boys and girls in his neighborhood.

"I don't want to be called a house painter, though, a suffragette. I am doing this as much for the benefit of my health, as I am tired of waiting for painters to turn up."

Income Puzzle Over Married Couples

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Among the troublesome questions that came up today for consideration by the income tax experts of the Treasury Department was this one:

"Is the income tax going to put a premium on single blessedness?"

Advocates of the law contended it would put a premium on marriage, but the interpreters now have found the paragraph affecting married persons not so easy of comprehension after all.

There is a question as to whether the $1,000 exemption in case of married people applies to both husband and wife if each have incomes coming within the law. As individuals each would be exempt under $4,000, but the law indicates that exemption cannot be extended to both.

Advertising Law Will Be Enforced

Vigilance Association Formed for Purpose by Leading Business Men.

A notable list of Greater Boston's retail business houses are represented among the stockholders of the Advertising Vigilance Association, an organization recently formed for the purpose of enforcing the law relating to fraudulent advertising and kindred methods of unfair competition in business.

Furthered by the Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and supported by the Pilgrim Publicity Associations, the "Dillingham-Foley-Sullivan bill" became a law in 1912. Then came the question of enforcement, and the Advertising Vigilance Association, Inc., is the answer.

Long and carefully were the details of the organization considered. Step by step were the plans worked out. To-day Massachusetts has not only a most stringent advertisement law on her statute books, but an incorporated body formed solely for the purpose of enforcing that law.

At the first meeting of the incorporating stockholders, held Wednesday, October 29, 1913, the following list of officers and directors was approved: President Joseph E. Priddy; treasurer, Charles A. Smith; clerk, Paul C. Cummings.

NOTED JEWS AND CHRISTIANS REJOICING AT BEILIS' ACQUITTAL

JUSTICE TRIUMPHS EVEN IN RUSSIA.

By ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—I heartily congratulate Russia and Christendom on Beilis' acquittal. It only remains for them both to ward off pogroms.

By RABBI HERTZ.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Humanity rejoices that justice is on the march and triumphs even in Russia. "Great is truth and it will prevail."

RESPONSIBILITY OF RUSSIA NOT CHANGED.

By MAX NORDAU.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The poor peasants who formed the jury have had more sentiment for Russia's true dignity than for the government. They have saved Russia the last indignity which would have been invited in the condemnation of this poor innocent, persecuted man.

But the verdict in no way changes the responsibility of the government who wished Beilis to be condemned.

WERE I A JEW I WOULD NOT LET IT REST.

By VLADIMER KOROLENKO.

KIEV, Nov. 11.—I am very happy at the result, which did not disappoint me. There is one corner of our Russian institutions which remains non-political—that is the Russian jury.

If I were a Jew I would not let the matter rest, but would take it to the Court of Appeals and have the inuendo removed.

RUSSIA IS SET FREE FROM BLACK HUNDRED

By OSCAR S. STRAUS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The acquittal of Beilis yesterday is a victory for Christianity.

The poor and long-suffering innocent victim is released. But it is Russia that is set free from the diabolical machinations of her greatest enemies—the Black Hundred.

I wish to comment upon the magnificent and enlightening editorial in the AMERICAN. A more powerful exposition of wrong against civilization has never been made.

TELEGRAM TO W. R. HEARST EXPRESSES GRATITUDE FOR PUBLICITY GIVEN.

Boston Jews are planning a big public celebration in honor of Mendel Beilis, the Jewish workman, whose life was saved by the wave of public sentiment against the tyranny of the Russian courts.

It is planned to have a mass meeting at which the complete story of the ritual murder case will be told with some of the incidental cruelties of the infamous "Black Hundred," Russia's anti-Semitic reactionaries, who are planning to persecute the Jews.

As a tribute to William Randolph Hearst and his papers of what they have accomplished for the Jewish race, various Jewish societies and organizations of Massachusetts will invite Mr. Hearst to a banquet in Boston.

The following telegram was sent:

To William Randolph Hearst:

In behalf of the Jewish community of Massachusetts, I extend to you congratulations and gratitude for your successful efforts in behalf of Mendel Beilis. Your chain of newspapers have undoubtedly contributed the largest share of the success in the way of getting freedom for Beilis.

It is the desire of the Jewish community of Massachusetts to be honored with your presence at a public celebration in commemoration of the victory won by the acquittal of Beilis. All liberty-loving people of Massachusetts will feel highly honored if you will accept the invitation to attend the celebration in Boston, date to be set by you at your convenience.

The courtesy of an immediate reply will be greatly appreciated.

ISAAC HILLER,
President of the Hebrew Aid Immigration Society of Massachusetts, No. 18 Tremont street, Boston.

Special celebrations to commemorate the Beilis verdict will be held on Friday evening this week in the synagogues and temples of Greater Boston.

Following are interviews by some of the most prominent Jewish rabbis and leading Jewish citizens of Boston.

By ISAAC HELLER,
President of the Hebrew Aid Society of Massachusetts.

It will be a relief to the Jews all over the world to hear that even in Russia, the truth has prevailed, and that accusation that has been made against Beilis, a poor Jewish laborer, was proven to be false.

I sincerely believe public opinion saved Beilis. It was the cry of humanity. Mendel Beilis was not the only one who was on trial, but Judaism was on trial in the Supreme Court in Kiev.

It is certainly a remarkable victory for the Jewish race, Russia, for a country of years, has been a hotbed of anti-Semitism. It has been demonstrated daily during the last thirty years that that feeling has debased the character of the Russian nation and tarnished its honor. I hope Russia will now realize her mistake.

The fearless stand taken by William Randolph Hearst and his chain of newspapers in this matter is, indeed, appreciated by the great masses of Jewish people. The AMERICAN has always championed the cause of the oppressed.

By RABBI AARON GOROVITZ
Of Congregation Novey Zedeck Roxbury.

The Beilis case has scored another victory for the Jews. Superstition dies hard, and in this gruesome twentieth century we hear that a man was found not guilty on the charge of "ritual murder." Everybody knew that Beilis was innocent and that the case was framed up by the leaders of the Black Hundred.

That the Jews have ever been guilty of ritual murder is an ancient malicious falsehood. There is absolutely no foundation for such a charge, and hence the feeling of justifiable disgust which swept over Christendom.

The AMERICAN has done wonderful work in behalf of the accused Beilis, and much credit is due to the AMERICAN for the victory. From my heart I wish to express my gratitude to the AMERICAN.

By ABRAHAM ALPERT.
Editor Jewish Boston American.

The ritual murder trial was carried on for the purpose of arousing the Russian populace to another outburst such as occured when thousands were massacred in Kishineff in 1904. But the attitude of the civilized world and the liberal authorities raised their voices in protest against the infamous blood accusation.

Some excuse might possibly be found for the credulity of bigoted and undeveloped minds in a benighted age, but the evidence of all the records makes it plain that the foul charge has never been other than the deliberate and cynical machination of wretches who were perfectly aware of its utter falsehood and groundlessness. No one is now blind to the real character of the ritual murder legend, and the recent attempts to make capital of it have only succeeded in bringing upon their authors the contempt and disgust of every decent person.

The Jewish people will ever remember with gratitude the stand taken by William Randolph Hearst during the Beilis process by presenting through his newspapers the real facts of the case to the public.

By RABBI M. M. EICHLER,
Of Temple Ohabei Shalom, Union Park Street.

The verdict came out just as every sensible man expected it. It shows, after all, that the Russian government cannot escape public opinion. A good deal of credit is due to the AMERICAN and to all the Hearst newspapers for their wonderful articles exposing the cruel acts against the Jews.

It is not becoming for us Americans to deplore and even rebuke the sins of Russia without at the same time noting and forsaking our own sins. Intolerance is not a safe quality with mankind anywhere, for it is kindred to cruelty.

By RABBI S. J. FRIEDERMAN.

In behalf of the Jewish community, I wish to express my gratitude to the AMERICAN and to all the Hearst newspapers for the wonderful work they done in behalf of humanity during the Beilis case.

I am convinced that public opinion saved Beilis. Every member of the Hebrew faith ought to be thankful to William Randolph Hearst, the man who is known to be generous and open-minded and a friend of the oppressed.

The most hopeful outlook from Kiev while the case was in progress, was that the newspapers of the world and correspondents at the trial, and the light was turned upon "Dark Russia."

By DR. CHARLES FLEISCHER,
Leader, the Sunday Commons.

Inclusive in their spiritual attitude, the Jews are remarkably peaceable. I speak of these in order to indicate that the Jew, instead of being thirsty for Christian blood, is surprisingly forgiving towards those who for ages pounded him and those who have continuously crucified the Christ whom they have confessed to worship.

The verdict in the Beilis case is a great victory for Judaism. But I believe that the Jews of the Russian empire are still in danger.

By HERMAN H. RUBENOVITZ,
Of the Temple Mishkan Tefila, Moreland and Copeland Streets, Roxbury.

The Beilis verdict of "not guilty" is one more instance to vindicate the Jews of the false accusation. Every sensible and well-thinking man knew that the poor Jewish laborer was innocent and that the case was framed up by the brutish leaders of the "Black Hundred," Russia's anti-Semetic reactionaries who are planning a program of massacre on the Jews of the Russian Empire.

It is only in a land so benighted, so steeped in prejudice as Russia that the Beilis tragedy can occur.

I am very grateful to the AMERICAN in behalf of the Jewish community for the wonderful work it has done by giving liberal space to the Beilis affair, thereby helping him to be acquitted.

By EDWARD J. BROMBERG,
Former State Senator and Director of Temple Mishkan Tefila.

The eyes of the whole civilized world were turned with horror to Russia since the beginning of this famous trial. Our much boasted present-day civilization has been the balance.

I look with great hope to Russia's awakening and realization that she will take her place among the justice and peace-loving nations of the world, where religious and racial tolerance are among first consideration.

There is no question whatever that William Randolph Hearst cannot be given too much praise for his humanely and manly stand in this Beilis case.

By JOSEPH MAX LEVINSON.

The acquittal of Beilis shows clearly that even in dark Russia, simple-minded men with no education whatever, the type of which the jury at the trial represented, could no longer be pretjudiced by men like Felsef Pranaites and Professor Sikorsky, who were actually trying to secure a conviction on their own misguided testimony. The verdict plainly points to the fact that the tyrannical yoke of the Russian government against its subjects is weakening by bounds and leaps, and it will not be long before the entire Russian lowig will realize its position in the autocracy.

Mr. Hearst and the Boston AMERICAN ought to be congratulated, for, after all, it was not Russian sympathy that helped the Beilis cause, but outside, particularly sympathy on the part of the American people.

BEILIS AND FAMILY WILL JOIN RELATIVES IN UNITED STATES

KIEV, Russia, Nov. 11.—Mendel Beilis, the man on whom the eyes of the whole world were centred during his trial here for the murder of a Christian boy for ritual purposes, was escorted to his home today by soldiers. He and his wife and children were reunited and are preparing to leave to join relatives in the United States, where Beilis believes he will be safe from the attacks of the anti-Semitic population here. Friends gathered at the Beilis home today and welcomed the liberated man. From their number was chosen a bodyguard for his protection.

Feeling is at a high pitch and all over the empire there is fear that the "Black Hundred" will rise, and that a "pogrom" of the worst type may follow. Hundreds of families are fleeing to other European countries and America.

The government has guarded against an uprising by sending eight hundred soldiers to Kiev. Others are on duty at various points in the surrounding country, and this whole section of the empire is practically an armed camp, under martial law.

Beilis' victory was a victory for the Jews of the world. He was charged with killing Andrew Yushinsky for sacrificial purposes in connection with the Jewish religion, and the religion itself was on trial. From every country of the world came protests against a conviction, and the evidence against Beilis was woefully weak and obviously manufactured. His acquittal was almost a necessity if the government did not wish to face the outraged sentiment of the world.

The manner in which the jury's verdict was elicited was however calculated to arouse hatred of the Jews. They were questioned by the court—and were allowed to answer only in monosyllables. In this manner they were asked:

"Were forty-seven wounds inflicted?"
"Yes."
"Was blood withdrawn?"
"Yes."
"Were five cups filled with this blood?"
"Yes."
"Was the act done at the brick works?" (Where Beilis worked.)
"Yes."
"Was Beilis concerned in it?"
"No."

These questions and answers are arranged from the differing reports of the verdict given by different representatives at the trial. The jury was tricked into giving out that boy's death was a ritual murder, but that Beilis was innocent. The government dared not convict Beilis.

The object of the first questions which led up to the verdict of "not guilty" was to placate the "Black Hundred" which was demanding Beilis' conviction. The effect of them, it is feared here, will be to incite an outbreak and massacre.

CHURCH LEADERS IN ENGLAND GRATIFIED JUSTICE IS DONE

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The AMERICAN correspondent received a number of messages from prominent men who had just heard the news of Beilis' acquittal.

Cardinal Logue, the Archbishop of Armagh, said: "I don't believe the 'blood ritual' accusation in this or any other case."

Father Bernard Vaughn said: "It is altogether satisfactory that justice triumphs over prejudice, passion and ignorance."

Henry Mormanthan telephoned: "It is an encouraging sign that justice has been done. It shows that the heart of the mass of the Russian people is in the right place."

World-Wide Interest Aided Verdict, Says Beilis Counsel

KIEV, Nov. 11.—Nothing in the course of my whole professional life has caused me such astonishment as this trial. I am the son of the author of the modern Russian criminal code, in fact, of the very law under which Beilis was tried. For twenty-six years I have acted as prosecutor for the Russian government and for ten years I have had the honor of defending many Jews, but never before have I witnessed such an amazing attitude as that taken by the prosecution and the president. The latter's summing up amounted to a most weighty speech for the prosecution. This was unpardonable and nothing like it had ever been seen before.

There is not the slightest doubt the world-wide interest in the case played a part in the verdict.—Attorney Sarondy, one of Beilis' counsel, to AMERICAN correspondent.

REBELS BEATEN BACK IN ATTACK ON CHIHUAHUA

immediate action will be taken by Congress to help solve the diplomatic tro ubles between the United States and Mexico.

Congress will also consider the granting of huge railroad concessions to Belgian promoters, providing for the construction of 5,000 miles of railway in the republic. If the railway and oil concessions go through, the promoters undoubtedly will be able to raise an immense fund which can be used to advantage if war ever breaks out with the United States.

To Send Families Abroad.

Persist nt rumors today that General Huerta and General Blanquet were about to leave the country probably originated from arrangements they are making to send their families abroad. Neither Huerta nor Blanquet intends to leave under any circumstances. They are preparing as best they can for war with the United States and will fight it out to the end, no matter how hopeless.

Other groundless and persistent rumors, spread throughout the city from the palace today that diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico had been broken off, caused some excitement, but no apparent anti-American feeling.

The people at large feel kindly toward all Americans, but the army officers are supporters of the Huerta cause. If the Northern rebels are recognized by the United States, every American in Southern Mexico will be in grave danger immediately, especially in this city. However, Mexico will not go to war until the new Congress meets and deals with the concessions, as upon them depends the raising of money.

Runs on Banks Continue.

The runs on the Banco Nacional and Banco Londres y Mexico continued today. Soldiers with carbines were stationed at both banks to preserve order. Thousands of depositors drew out all their money. All demanded for silver, but got but very little coin. The scarcity of coin is seriously handicapping all business and conditions are getting worse, although relief is promised by the government. Immense quantities of half dollars are being coined and put into circulation, but are hoarded as soon as put out, as confidence in the banks is shattered.

MEXICAN CONGRESS WILL BE IGNORED BY U. S. GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Acts of the new Mexican Congress will not be recognized by the American government as valid. Their government will take the same attitude toward the newly elected senators and deputies that it has taken toward General Huerta. This development of the Mexican situation was the outstanding feature of today.

Observers here believe that the Mexican crisis will come when the new Congress assembles and tries to gain financial support from European governments. By this time, unless Huerta is eliminated, President Wilson's policy will include drastic measures. These hinge in great measure on the attitude of Europe. As long as Huerta is encouraged by European financial interests, he will make a stubborn fight to maintain himself in power.

EX-AMBASSADOR WHITE DECLARES IT LOOKS LIKE WAR

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Dr. Andrew D. White, formerly ambassador to Germany and minister to Russia, said today: "It seems as if the United States were about to go into war with Mexico. President Wilson has got himself into a difficulty by saying what he would do and what he would not do in case certain things happened."

Police Search for Cambridge Veteran

The Boston and Cambridge police are today searching for George H. Elliot, eighty-three, of Cambridge, a Civil War veteran, who has been missing from his home at No. 190 Green street since last Thursday. He walks with the aid of a cane and his right arm had been cut off below the elbow.

MRS. BLAKE ENDS MACKAY HEART SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Friends today freely predict a speedy resulting of the shredded matrimonial bonds as a result of the action of Mrs. Catherine Ketcham Blake, wife of Dr. Joseph A. Blake, the noted surgeon, in consenting to withdraw her suit for the recovery of $1,000,000 for the alienation of her husband's affection, brought against Mrs. Catherine Duer Mackay, wife of Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company.

Mrs. Blake gave her approval of this statement by Arthur C. Train, counsel for Mrs. Mackay:

"The action commenced in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Joseph A. Blake against Mrs. Catherine H. Mackay for $1,000,000, for alienating the affections of Dr. Blake, was discontinued. At the time Mrs. Blake signed a consent to the discontinuance of the action she executed an instrument releasing Mrs. Mackay from all claims of every description and character. Not one cent has been paid or promised to Mrs. Blake, either by Mrs. Mackay or by any one acting for her or in her behalf, for the discontinuance of the law suit or the execution of the release."

The belief that a reconciliation between the Blakes is near is strengthened by the fact that Mr. Mackay, who sailed for Europe on the Imperator on June 25 last, accompanied by his children, Katherine, Ellen and John William Mackay, and without notifying Mrs. Mackay, is now returning to this city.

Suspend Marconi Brokers for 5 Years

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Stock Exchange directors today ordered the suspension for five years of Messrs. Heybora and Croft for their methods in placing the shares of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America on the exchange, and which created a big scandal in England. The suspension is equivalent to expulsion.

CASE OF THAW MAY BE HEARD AT CONCORD

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 11.—Either this city or Littleton will be the scene of the battle in the United States District Court to free Harry K. Thaw, it became known today.

Judge Aldrich, who will hear the case, was expected to conclude the Portsmouth sitting of the court today or tomorrow, so that there is thought to be no chance that it will go to the seaside city. Concord and Littleton are the only other Granite State cities where the United States District Court sits.

Many predict that Judge Aldrich will hold court in Concord to save expense to the parties involved, as a shift of term to Littleton might prove costly.

Thaw has been much interested in this plan, which, according to Rowell, has the indorsement of members of the New Hampshire Supreme Court. When Rowell left Thaw, he reminded of the prisoner:

"His health has improved greatly since I saw him a few months ago."

While Thaw and his lawyers have adopted a new policy of silence in regard to their pleas, it is known that they intend to attack the good faith of W. T. Jerome before Judge Aldrich; that they will go into detail regarding the Dutchess County Grand Jury proceedings at which Jerome at first claimed an indictment was found; and that they will present affidavits from former supporters of Jerome's case against Thaw, showing that the men who swore to the affidavits, were at first mistaken.

Photographs taken from inside the walls of the Matteawan Asylum will also figure. Those are intended to show that Thaw, who is accused of conspiracy, could not have watched the approach of the car in which he fled from any of the points where he was supposed to have been standing.

EVELYN'S DRAMATIC LOVE STORY

CHAPTER LXVIII.

"For as the breeze can bear—"
—Lord Byron.

Not everyone whom Hartridge and Jerome wished to testify at the trial was conveniently within the State of New York, where he or she could be summoned.

Hartridge wished to have Truxton Beale and Thomas Meviish as witnesses for the defence. They were with Evelyn and Harry when White was shot. But both men were in California, where they had large interests.

Early in December Hartridge asked Judge Newburger in the Supreme Court for the appointment of an interrogatory commission, which could take testimony of these men in the form of depositions. Hartridge did not know but what Jerome would oppose his request, so he waited with anxiety what Jerome, who was in the court, would say.

Jerome, with his usual legal craft, made no opposition. The law of New York State in criminal cases says that the District Attorney can not apply for such commissions if the defence objects, but the defence has the right to apply. But, if the defence applies, it opens the legal door for the prosecution also to examine witnesses.

Jerome asked Hartridge:

"Would you object if the prosecution asked for the appointment of a commission?"

Jerome Showed Hand.

Hartridge wanted to know what witnesses Jerome sought to interrogate outside of the State. Then Jerome showed his hand, saying:

We would like to examine the mother and brother of the defendant's wife. They are not in Pittsburgh. Perhaps we might wish to examine a witness in South Africa."

Justice Newburger said he would sign the papers asking for such commissions. Then Hartridge hastily said that the defence might wish to withdraw its motion. Jerome retorted that if the defence tried to do that he would object.

As a matter of fact, Hartridge went to Justice Newburger two days later and withdrew his request for any examination. It was giving too much opportunity to Jerome.

When Jerome hinted that he might wish to take testimony from a witness in South Africa Hartridge was aghast. On the way out of court Hartridge said to Garvan:

"Why this is an awful thing. If you find it necessary to send to South Africa for the testimony of any witness it will be months before the trial can be called."

Garvan did not vouchsafe any answer, leaving the inference that this was the least of the prosecution's troubles.

Who Jerome Meant.

The South African witness at whom Jerome had hinted was Miss Ada Vera Simonton, a writer who had been asked by White, it is said, to look up Evelyn Nesbit in Paris and help her.

A newspaper had published a series of letters purporting to be from Evelyn's mother to White, in which Mrs. Holman asked White to interfere between Evelyn and Harry, who were in Paris. Miss Simonton was going to Paris at that time. While know her well. According to the current story, he asked her to see what she could do to help Evelyn.

Miss Simonton had since gone to Africa to study the monkey "language," with her father, Dr. Simonton, an expert on Bantans. They sailed August 1.

But, more disquieting to the defence, was Jerome's statement that he might seek testimony from Evelyn's mother and brother, Mrs. Holman and Howard Nesbit, especially the former.

There had been many rumors to the effect that Stanford White had not only provided for Evelyn at one time, but for the Nesbit family as well as sending Howard Nesbit to school.

If the commission to take testimony should be appointed and Mrs. Holman should refuse to answer questions she might be adjudged in contempt of court, unless she pleaded that answering questions might tend to incriminate or degrade her.

Judges Announced.

At any rate, Hartridge decided that he didn't wish to have any commission of this kind appointed, either because it would cause delay, or give Jerome a chance to have Evelyn's family questioned.

Just as this commission matter was being started and then stopped, the judges of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court announced their assignment of judges who were to sit in the Supreme Court sessions the coming term.

To the general surprise Rewoder Goff, as Justice-elect, was assigned mainly to the civil side and was eliminated from the Thaw case wholly. Justice Fitzgerald was slated for the January term, and was the most probable one, according to the prospect then, to hear Thaw's case.

On December 15 Hartridge went to Justice O'Gorman of the Supreme Court and asked him to make the District Attorney free Thaw or try him. Jerome replied that he had no objections to an early trial.

Then Justice Newburger, before whom the matter happened to come, set Monday, January 21, as the exact date for Thaw to go on trial.

December approached its end. Christmas Day came.

Although the fact did not seem to be generally known, Christmas Day was Evelyn's birthday. She was just twenty-two years old, for she testified later at Harry's trial that she was born on 19 January 25, 1891.

Harry had had a big Teddy Bear sent to the Tombs to give to Evelyn when she made a Christmas visit to him. The Teddy was nearly three feet high. It was just at the height of the feminine rage for these cuddly playthings.

Every cage in the Tombs with a box of candy for Harry, but had no holiday pass, so did not see him. The next day she came and received the bear, which tickled her hugely. She hugged it out to her carriage and was "snapped" repeatedly by photographers who were lurking about for her reappearance.

Harry's Christmas was depressing. He had been in the Tombs six even months. He was heartily sick of the confinement and restraint. He was eager for his trial to begin.

Christmas was being celebrated all over the city with the usual joyousness and, even in the Tombs, as in other institutions, there was a holiday festivity, as far as possible.

But the Tombs celebration only served to emphasize to Harry the unpleasantness of his own predicament. He had expected to be out by that time, a free man. But he was still held by the hands of the law, with his trial before him.

To Be Continued.

The Home Beauty Parlor

By Betty Deed

Audrey: In these party days of short sleeves and low necks it is vastly important what kind of whitener you use. Ordinary face powders or talcum will not successfully hide the summer's tan and they won't stay on. The best way out of the dilemma is to get 4 ounces of spermaxa and mix in ½ pint of hot water; add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This is a splendid lotion for making the skin look fresh for a long time. It will not rub off like loose powder, and has a penetrating effect on the skin of lasting beneficial results. Inexpensive, too. For a few cts. It is very economical, too. For a few weeks remover see answer to Miss Hazel.

Miss Helen L.: Weak eyes are not only a drawback to books, but neglecting them often leads to serious eye troubles. I make an eye tonic by dissolving an ounce of orvyex in a pint of water. A few drops of this in each eye every day will strengthen your eyes and make them sparkling and brilliant. You do not say whether or not you wear glasses, but in any case this wonderful eye tonic will prove soothing and helpful as well as beautifying.

Mrs. Meadows: Your unhealthy hair seems to indicate that the hair follicles secrete too much oil, and this will lead to dandruff and other hair troubles. You are wise to take it in time, and I strongly advise the use of the irresistible reathros for a shampoo. Get a package at the druggist's, and mix a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This is plenty for a good washing, and will give you the best effects of a fine treatment at a professional Beauty Parlor at small cost. Notice the fluffiness and stillness of your hair afterwards. This is caused by the fact that reathros gets rid immediately of the excess oil and all dirt and dandruff.

Phyllis Lee: Yes, there is always the danger of increasing flesh too fast when you once begin to take it on. Perhaps it would be well to begin reducing now before you feel the fat a burden. Try this simple remedy—it will require no dieting or special exercise beyond sensible living. Get 4 ounces parcola and dissolve it in 1½ pints water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. It will work rapidly, is not disagreeable, and you will experience no bad effects.

Miss Hazel: The person who guessed you to be older than you are was doubtless influenced by those crow's feet which, you say are creeping about your eyes. Let me repeat the formula that I have often given in this column. Mix 8 ounces of almonds in half a pint of cold water; add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand over night. At the first application of this greaseless beauty cream you will feel the skin contract slightly, and after the wrinkles are effaced the skin will stay free because this fine preparation puts health and strength into the tissues by aiding the natural methods of flesh and skin construction.

Donna Bella: You are right—"rats" must go, and it is a good thing. It is not only unnecessary, but unhealthful to clutter up the head with false hair, nets, rolls, etc. Better still all of these is a good healthy head of hair, which you, yourself, can easily obtain at small expense. Twice a week rub into the hair a tonic—made by dissolving one ounce of quinsin in a half-pint of alcohol and adding a half-pint of cold water. Hair specialists agree that a good tonicine hair lotion such as this destroys dandruff germs and prevents the stringy, matted condition of the hair.

Alice H.: I have often given the formula for a complexion cream belly. It appears again today in answer to Miss Hazel.

Pessimistic: That dark, muddy look to your complexion may have been caused by to do with any skin troubles. From what you say I fancy you are only run down as is natural at this time of the year and would advise you to use this tonic for the next few weeks: Dissolve an ounce of tarlene in a half pint of alcohol; add one-half cup of sugar and enough hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. The success of this is slight and there is no remedy known so energizing as this old-fashioned tonic. After all, you know, health is beauty.

Shrimp and Skinny Shaner Are Taking a Few Days' Rest
Shrimp Expects to Be Back Soon with a Lot of New Trouble for Skinny

Estelle Was a Nice Girl, but Just Look What She Did

Swept the Room with Her Eyes.

Estelle was a nice girl and a good stenographer.

To prove she was a nice girl, we tell you she never put empty peanut shells in another girl's typewriter, and to prove she was a good stenographer, we tell you that she knew exactly how many s's and p's there should be in Mississippi, and how many n's and t's there should be in Cincinnati. So there.

Estelle was very tidy. Every morning when she got up she swept the room with a glance. This is much easier than sweeping the room with a broom or even a vacuum cleaner. Try it.

Also she was very cheerful. She would run downstairs with a song on her lips. Of course, she removed the song from her lips and laid it on the piano before breakfast.

Not this has nothing to do with Estelle's adventure with the millionaire. She had always wanted to marry a millionaire, because she was fond of round figures, and she knew that this young man must be a millionaire, because he put a penny in a subway slot machine and didn't cuss when the machine refused to work.

"Your eyes are stars," said the young man to Estelle.

This seems a foolish thing to say, because stars only come out at night, and it's too dark then to see anything.

However, it's just as sensible as telling a girl she has seashell ears. An oyster is a seashell, isn't it? and you'd never tell a girl she looked as if she had a couple of half-shells on the sides of her head. Not that it matters much, the way they do their hair now.

Estelle gave the young man a burning glance. Look at the picture and you'll get the effect. Seems to us a burning glance would be as disagreeable as burning feathers; but anyway, that's what she did.

Frederick—that was the young man's name—was frozen to the spot. Odd that a burning glance should freeze him; but that's what it did, and we have to stick to facts. It's not quite so easy to stick to facts as to stick to flypaper, but we must do it.

As we said, Frederick was frozen to the spot, and if he moved he would have to take the spot with him. As the spot he was in was the Summer street tunnel station, this would be some job.

A melting glance from Estelle enabled him to thaw out and as he looked up she dropped her eyes. (See illustration.)

Fortunately they were not broken and Frederick quickly picked them up for her. He made eyes at her for a moment before getting them replaced, and was just about to speak when a sudden silence fell upon him and knocked him down.

When he came to, Estelle had taken the Sullivan square train. Where she took it we don't know, and it was a shame to take it anyway. It didn't belong to her.

Your Eyes Are Stars.

She Gave Him a Burning Glance.

He Was Frozen to the Spot.

She Dropped Her Eyes.

ATTRACTIONS AT PLAYHOUSES THIS WEEK

BILLIE BURKE 'AMAZONS' STAR AT TREMONT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Possibly Charles Frohman captured his original idea for a revival of "The Amazons" from the present amazing spread of thought and action along the line of equal rights for women. Of course, there is nothing in common between the play and the advanced notions of some of our progressive ladies, except that Mr. Pinero, in "The Amazons," cheerfully shows you that women can never be men—not even in the drama, which so obligingly affords a broad excuse for almost anything.

The revival of Mr. Pinero's "The Amazons," which Miss Billie Burke is to visit to the Tremont next evening, developed no regrets. To the new generation that has grown from knickerbockers and knee frocks to fully developed playgoers since the play was originally produced, it must be fresh and agreeable entertainment. Mr. Frohman, in his wisdom, attended to all that when he employed the piece for Miss Burke, and he added extra insurance by surrounding his star with the best working company she has toiled with since blossoming into one of the important members of Mr. Frohman's official family.

While "The Amazons" is good comedy, adroitly drawn and dressed with characters that cannot fail to hold your interest, the real joy of last evening's performance was found in the perfect pitching of Miss Burke's little organization. "The Amazons" was an entertainment that had many lines of sound legs to stand upon rather than a single pair, which is often the case where a charming article is concerned. And for a strictly dramatic offering, this play ran rather more strongly to legs than most of us have been trained to expect.

Naturally, one so gifted with personality as Miss Burke would find good reason for profitable employment in the role of an attractive, athletic girl who had been brought up as a boy. You may be sure that she spread that personality all over the play. She was a Johnnie you would be glad to know. Miss Burke grows in her art and the Lady Tom she drew from last evening lost none of its charm in the breeches she unhinged so well.

"The Amazons" depended upon Ferdinand Gottschalk for its richest humor. That actor's facial contortions was a bubbling fountain of fun—it never balled. Mr. Gottschalk carried his odd unique drolleries from the original American production of the play, which dates back to 1904. Print Williams, too, may allow his memory to drift back to the original production, in which he served faithfully as the Frenchman lover who tried to be a regular Englishman.

"The Amazons" proved itself the most agreeable of the many recent dramatic revivals. It did not display the usual out-of-fashion form that is expected in such affairs. Its comedy moments sparkled with the sharpness kind of wit, and its situations were good enough to belong to the best of the present day drama. As a matter of fact we have improved much a long distance forward since Mr. Pinero wrote "The Amazons."

Gaiety Theatre.

Jack Singer's "Bohman Show" arrived at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday for a week's stay with Boston burlesque patrons. It was more than the average burlesque entertainment in many ways, for besides the usual and familiar features there were numerous incidents that might safely belong to musical shows which sell for higher than burlesque prices. Lew Kelly, a comedian who knows his art, supplied most of the fun, but he was assisted by other competent principals and a chorus of lively young women.

"Country Boy" Hit at Castle Square

Selwyn's Comedy Well Played by John Craig's Company.

"The Country Boy," a comedy in four acts, by Edgar Selwyn, is the attractive offering making a marked hit at the Castle Square Theatre this week.

This play offers a photograph of reality. It does not bring a new conception of life. It simply sets a picture of life known to all, without professing to go beneath the surface. Its aim is modest and is fulfilled.

The story of the boy who, leaving his simple home to win fame and fortune in New York, returns home a man, is so widely known as to require little attention.

It is all simple and appealing. The characters are sharply contrasted, and yet not one of them is drawn unsympathetically. The actors, too—Mr. Meek, Mr. Chirlette, Mr. Orrendo, Miss Olsson, Miss Shirley, Miss Colcord and others—are in sympathy with their characters.

The three-star combination, in which are blended Fred Stone, David Montgomery and Elsie Janis, brought "The Lady of the Slipper" to the Colonial Theatre last evening. It will remain through the holidays. This musical comedy version of Cinderella and her dainty feet was unquestionably the most conspicuous of the musical comedy success in New York last season, and if the greeting extended at last evening's performance was a true indication of what is to happen here in Boston the success of the piece is already established. Fred Stone was never funnier, either in his dancing or his acrobatics, and, of course, Miss Janis found herself enjoying the same enthusiastic popularity that has always attended her visits to Boston. "The Lady of the Slipper" will be given an extended review in tomorrow's (Wednesday's) AMERICAN.

Globe Theatre.

Bobby Leonard and his company topped the new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday with a sketch called "Almost a Manager." It was a lively offering, with strong comedy, following it from beginning to end. Another attractive feature was discovered in Mme. Busse's toy terriers, one of the liveliest canine acts that has ever been seen at that house. A dozen other vaudeville features and new pictures completed the bill.

Next Week's Bills.

"Stop Thief," will be the new attraction at the Park Theatre next Monday.

"The Fight," which in its original form was sensational enough to attract the attention of the New York police, will come to the Tremont next week.

Grand Opera House.

Jack Reid and his "Progressive Girls" furnished the entertainment at the Grand Opera House yesterday. The name of the show was "The Mystery Moon Girl," and it had a full measure of pretty young women.

Orpheum Theatre.

If you like piano playing that is fast and furious, the Piano Rags at the Orpheum Theatre will appeal to you. This act was the leading feature of yesterday's bill. There were other vaudeville acts and new motion pictures.

Howard Athenaeum.

There was another electric feature at the Old Howard yesterday. It was supplied by Eddie Murphy of South Boston, one of the best of present day lightweights. Murphy was seen in a special sketch. The burlesque part of the bill was filled by "The Monte Carlo Girls," a spirited collection of girls and comedians.

St. James Theatre.

Frances Clare and "Her Eight Girl Friends" headed the new program at the St. James Theatre yesterday. They presented a musical comedy called "Just Kids." Other new vaudeville features and motion pictures made up the bill.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

The next bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday was headed by Perry's "ten Minstrel Misses." It was a lively singing act. New pictures were also shown.

Waldron's Casino.

"Local Color" was the name of the new burlesque show at the Casino Theatre yesterday. It was swift entertainment, with Alberta Gilbert and George Wood in the leading roles.

Raise $1,500,000 to Widen Avery Street

Councilmen Pass Order Without a Dissenting Vote.

Business and insurance interests are elated today over the passage of the order for the widening of Avery street, between Washington and Tremont streets, by the City Council, without a dissenting vote, providing $1,500,000 for the purpose.

Because the law allows the assessment of benefits wherever a property is found to have been benefited by such projects, the net cost to the city will be only about one-third of that amount, or $500,000.

Dismiss Petition to Reduce Paper Rate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today dismissed the petition of the Haverhill Boxboard Company of Haverhill against the Boston & Albany Railroad asking a reduction in the rate on paper from Haverhill to Boston on the ground that rates for the same distance via a more circuitous route were lower. The commission held it was an intra-state case and one to be considered only by the Massachusetts Public Service Commission.

Houghton entered Harvard at the age of fourteen, having prepared entirely at home, with his father, Rev. C. S. Houghton of South Boston and Norwell. He was one of the best scholars in the class of 1913, making a continuous honor record, with highest honors at the end of the course. He graduated with magna cum laude in history, his chief study, and was elected to the Harvard honor society, Phi Beta Kappa, on the ground of special merit.

Noonan's Election Vetoed by Statute

Leon P. Noonan of Quincy was elected associate member of the Norfolk County Commission at the last election. But John F. Merrill of Quincy is chairman of the commission, and under the law which says no two members shall come from the same city, Noonan cannot serve. William M. THE VERSATILE HENRY E. DIXEY IS AT KEITH'S

He has with him his Mon-Dream-Vaud-Ologue. Mr. Dixey, early in his sketch, gives a cleverly worded dissertation upon the requirements and the limitation of the actor. Later in his act he surprises his audience by performing a number of sleight-of-hand tricks with all the grace and ease of the professional.

Lucy Daly, upon the program as Boston's own comedienne, received a most cordial greeting as she stepped upon the stage at the conclusion of her act, of some mammoth floral remembrances from friends, an immense bunch of yellow chrysanthemums showed her popularity. Miss Daly sings several songs and gives the "ragtime moderne" and the "Tango Chinese," with the assistance of Paul Chute.

Edmund Hayes, in "The Piano Mover," with Hayes himself as the boss and the emancipated, ragged "Bozo" as his "gang" of men. "The Piano Mover" is one of the funniest sketches in vaudeville today.

Grace Wilson sings some very catchy songs, with some intoxicatingly rapid changes of costume. George W. Jones and Harry Silvester, last one-half of that once famous "Trio Quartette," have an interesting sketch. "The Two Drummers," written by Lea Carrilla.

Beaumont and Arnold, in "Under the Gay White Lights," the Brimbos, English revelry entertainers, and the Four Merkle Sisters, from the Circus Schumann complete the bill prior to the usual motion pictures.

Argue Boy's Suit Against Teaher

Judge Hall at Salem today heard arguments in the suit of twelve-year-old Arthur W. Lundregan against Miss Eva Purington, a Lynn school teacher. Lundregan is suing the teacher for $5,000, alleging she struck him with a fan and that his eye was put out of the sight of one eye. Miss Purington denies hitting Lundregan or having any intention of striking him.

Bankers at Shubert to See Al Jolson

Bank officers, their friends and families, filled the Shubert Theatre with a crowd of 1,600, with every seat reserved for the first theatre party and Indigo night. The audience enjoyed "The Honeymoon Express," applauding Al Jolson and other favorites, who responded with an unusual number of encores.

Felix and the Barry Girls at National

George Felix and the Barry Girls are the entertaining bill at the National Theatre this week. This acrobatic comedian and dancer has chosen exclusive and fast steps and dance as well as wear fetching costumes and look pretty.

The novel feature of the bill is furnished by the Dunne Adair Trio in clever aerial dancing acrobatics. All are young women of unusual ability, whose training showed pleasingly. Lew Brice and Lillian Gonne have a specialty entitled "Mistress Let Loose," that is all that the name indicates. It gives Miss Gonne an opportunity to display some stunning costumes.

The other acts include the Three Whelans, comedians and singers; Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, in an amusing sketch entitled "Suppressing the Press," Murphy and Francis, black face comedians; the Martins, comedy trio; Tom Keono, Japanese ring expert, and Charley Raye in pictorial ballards.

Plays That Remain.

"Bought and Paid For" continues at the Majestic Theatre, where it is proving the dramatic sensation of the season. It is a play of American life that should not pass unheeded.

* * *

At Jolson and "The Honeymoon Express" are keeping the big centre of the town at the Shubert Theatre. It is a big show, with lots of girls, and Mr. Jolson's humorous drolleries.

* * *

"The Sunshine Girl" has entered upon its final week at the Hollis Street Theatre, and Lina Sanderson makes a charming centre-piece for this spirited musical comedy.

* * *

The Henry Jewett Players entered upon a new week at the Plymouth. The aire yesterday, with "Let's Go A-Gardening." This is a pretty play of dowers and sunshine.

* * *

"The Whip" began its second week at the Boston Theatre last evening. There never was a more complete melodrama and the big Boston Theatre needs all of the ample room to accommodate the crowds.

* * *

Elsie Ferguson's first week at the Park Theatre, in "The Strange Woman," began last evening. In this delightful American comedy she is easily proving her artistic ability.

* * *

HARVARD MEN FOCUS ALL ATTENTION ON GETTING READY FOR BIG ANNUAL WITH YALE

Harvard Prepares for Game with Yale

Not Worrying Over Result of Brown Game—Focus All Attentions Towards Old Eli

By SYDE LYNES.

"PRACTICE is everything."

Diogenes Laertius, no relative to the gentleman with the lantern, attributes this statement to Periander. Realizing the significance of this statement, we must admit that Periander had the right idea and we begin to wonder if there was football back in those Grecian days. At all events, following the theories of Periander, heaven rest his noble soul, Harvard's eleven rested for one day and thereby returning to the [illegible] vigor, gets busy again [illegible] in preparation for the big game with Yale a little over a week away.

To be sure there is a game in between, but Harvard is not going to do any worrying about that, but focus all attention on getting ready for the sons of Eli when they come to Cambridge on their Hasbrouck storming of the Stadium.

LIGHT WORKOUT TODAY.

GENECA says that "Fire is the test of gold, adversity of strong men," and it will be interesting to see just how the [illegible] which the Crimson was put last week will affect them in the rest of the work this year. The work today was not expected to be terribly hard for the season's assembling drive to whip the team into shape is about done with. From now on it will be a process of oiling up the cogs and wheels of the big Crimson machine—we are sorry this phrase has been so generally used, for it expresses our idea so exactly—and getting them to running smoothly without danger of clogging or tearing out gears. In short, team work must be made perfect, the rough edges smoothed off, any tendency to ragged playing must be eliminated and Harvard's eleven moulded into the perfect playing eleven which the material demands should be the case.

TRUMBULL BACK IN SQUAD.

PRACTICALLY everyone on the Harvard eleven now, with the exception of Middendorf, who is still out of the fray, is in fine condition. There may be a few minor bruises which linger in no way the work of the men, but on the whole the Harvard squad is extremely fortunate in the physical condition of its men. Trumbull was expected to get into the dummy scrimmage to be held today, and start limbering up and getting used to the feel of cleated shoes and mole skins.

DISCUSS CHANCES WITH YALE.

THE first day's work was rather light for the first string men who got into the battle with the Tigers. That is, we consider it light work when the men are not required to report for practice in the Stadium, but rather gather about the fire, ruminating about what might have happened had they been a decent one at Princeton, and speculating as to what will happen when the Yale dog of war is loosed in the Stadium, which has yet to see that erstwhile ferocious animal corralled, tied, his throat cut and his carcase tossed into the Charles. If Captain Storer's team can accomplish this feat this year, and there is every reason to suspect that such might be the case, the Harvard eleven of 1913 will indeed be one to pass down into history.

MAHAN WORKS ALL ALONE.

MAHAN was the only one of the regulars who reported for work, and it was probably because the coaches thought his long confinement to the infirmary made it seem wisdom to give him plenty of exercise to get him into fighting trim for the two last battles. He spent the afternoon kicking about, running, and acting as cheer leader cheering section, etc., while the subs let loose their fancy on the second eleven.

The subs smothered the poor scrubs in an avalanche of three touchdowns, scored on all kinds of fancied plays.

THE VERSATILE SUBS.

FREEDLEY ran the sub eleven and showed a versatility of attack of which Harvard could certainly not have been accused before this season. Is it possible that the Crimson has a lot of crafty intricate formations that are being held back for the edification and possibly the mystification, to say nothing of the mortification of the Elis? Heaven spare us any such shock!

At all events, the fact that this great variety of formations exist in the Crimson tactical book seems to indicate that it may be treated to a versatility of attack that has yet been lacking in Harvard's game.

VARSITY TAKE NOTICE.

THE first score came along at the start of the three quarter hour scrimmage. It was started by Freedley's thirty-yard forward pass to Felton, followed by three slashes at the line and then another forward pass, Hollins to Freedley, for a touchdown. Let us hope the varsity takes note of the success of this play by their leaders and use it a little more. It lends the game more excitement, and that's what we crave.

Then getting the ball on their own twenty-yard line, by persistent hammering at the line, a thirty-yard run by McKissock and some more battering, the ball was finally carried over by Hollis. Then later taking the pigskin at midfield it was worked to within twenty yards of the goal, and Hollins, from a fake kick formation, executed one of his fleet end runs, which ended in a touchdown.

HUNTINGTON LEADS DRILL.

"FREDDIE" HUNTINGTON, fullback on the eleven in 1911 and one of the best little defensive men the Crimson has had for some time, was on the field and helping in this line of work. He can teach some of the players in the backfield a whole lot regarding the department of the game, and we hope he will do it.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Pougeot's bitterest rival, Louis Delage, who fought [illegible] stiff [illegible] European racing events this season, may invade the United States next year in quest of his American speed laurels, won at Indianapolis. Albert Guyot, who drove a Sunbeam but very, and for sixteen laps led the French Grand Prix at Amiens, has been named as probable representative. He is to have the car which won the Grand Prix at Le Mans, establishing a new European road racing record of 76.8 miles an hour. Pougeot's best performance for the year was 72.2, at Amiens.

In addition there is a possibility of Baldet, then of the Delage camp, entering over. Baldot is the man whose prowess, it is said, caused Peugeot to withdraw from the Le Mans contest, fearing defeat. That cause for misgivings existed was amply proved by the sensational manner in which he won, reeling off the last lap at an average of eighty-five miles an hour, a speed which he had nearly caused his undoing. Guyot ran second in this contest, being but a minutes behind the winner. Between the two, other entrants in the Indianapolis sweepstakes will get a run for their money.

Frank W. Smith of New York, elected president of the Electric Vehicle Association of America at its recent convention, will make his first public appearance in this office at a joint meeting and dinner of the New England section, E. V. A. of A., and the Electric Motor Car Club of Boston, to be held at Hotel Thorndike next Friday evening.

Chairman J. A. Hunnewell of the section and Presidents Day Baker of the club will preside at brief meetings of their respective organizations prior to the address. Mr. Smith will speak on the topic, "The Past and Future of the Electric Vehicle Association of America." Business Secretary Draper of the two organizations reports a large number of reservations for the dinner already received.

H. T. Myers, manager of the wholesale department of the Studebaker in New England, has gone to Detroit for a week's conference with the factory officials.

Casey Favorite for Exeter Captaincy

EXETER, N. H., Nov. 11.—Of the victorious Exeter football team there were only four players who gained their "E," they being Lowe, Comerford, Enwright and Kempton, all the others being veterans of last year's eleven. There will be lost by graduation six of the eleven—Enwright and Bingham, who will go to Harvard; Captain Kelly, Neal and Bolton, who will go to Princeton; "Cupid" Black to Yale, and Quigley, a veteran of last year's eleven, also to Yale.

The captain for next year will be elected probably this week, the chances favoring "Eddie" Casey of Natick, this their year completes his second [illegible] on the eleven.

Tiger Scrubs in Yale Colors Oppose Varsity

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—The coaches of the Princeton football team have drilled a scrub team in a series of [illegible] plays, and today the dummy Eli team, as it is called, will don Yale jerseys and line up against the varsity in a hard scrimmage. Tomorrow also the regulars will be placed on the defensive against the "Elis" for a short setto, probably the last one during the week's preparation.

Penn Prepares for Michigan Game

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 11.—The University of Pennsylvania football team has begun preparations for the game with Michigan at Ann Arbor next Saturday. With the exception of Captain Minds, who was somewhat used up in the Dartmouth game, last Saturday, all the players are in good condition.

Minds will report for practice today. The varsity men were put through a long and hard secret practice behind closed gates on Franklin Field. No scrimmage was indulged in, but there was some "shadow" charging and lots of punting by the backs. Much attention was given the end men.

The Pennsylvania players will leave here Wednesday at noon for Detroit, where they will be the guests of the Detroit Country Club until Saturday morning.

SCHOOL TITLE FIGHT NARROWS DOWN TO FOUR

The fight for the State scholastic football championship is getting closer and more heated as the season grows older. But four teams now remain to have it out for the title. The Waltham, Everett and Haverhill eleven are not as yet bon forced to taste the bitter pill of defeat, while St. John's Prep, not only has been undefeated, but has not even been scored upon. It is the only school team which can claim for it may be taken into consideration that the Danvers boys have not met any of the leading elevens of the State, with the exception of Salem High, which they soundly licked.

Waltham was held to a scoreless tie by Somerville, while Haverhill and Everett have played a 0 to 0 game.

Waltham High has had a weak schedule, with the exception of the last three games. Somerville unexpectedly held the Watch City team, but the Maiden and Newton boys went to pieces and did not display the style of football that they were credited with. Nevertheless, Waltham is a team that few elevens have anything on, and it is going to be a merry battle to prove which is the superior team.

Coe O'Donnell of Everett has a team that is one of the best ever sent out from the school. He can claim no Brickley, but he has a bunch of players that are able to give a good account of themselves. It was only in the season when Everett clashed with Haverhill, and it had not then hit its stride. This also could be said of Haverhill, but Haverhill hasn't been going at the clip that Everett has of late. Coe O'Donnell's team has cleaned up everything that has opposed it.

Haverhill possesses perhaps the strongest team in its history. It has encountered but little difficulty in vanquishing all of its opponents, with the exception of Everett. After a hard fight it defeated Rindge, but the Cambridge Tech School was minus the services of Captain White, its star backfield man, at the time.

Coach Carroll has been very successful his first season at St. John's Prep. He has developed a team which has not been scored upon. While the eleven has a clean slate, nevertheless, it has not met any of the big elevens that are contending for the title. Therefore, its strength and right to claim the championship cannot be justly considered. Judging from its past appearances, however, the eleven has a fair chance for the honor.

It now looks as if some post-season games will have to be played to settle this claim. If these contests should take place, they would be surely worth while seeing.

SCHOOLBOY SPORT NOTES

THE MANY FRIENDS OF HARRY Allen, the Braintree High back, who was injured in the Thayer Academy game, were glad to hear that he will live and was expected to leave his bed in a few weeks. The concussion of the brain and other injuries which he suffered were not serious.

• • •

RINDGE TECHNICAL TACKLER Lynn English today at Lynn. An easy time is expected by the Cambridge team in defeating the Shoe City eleven. Boston Latin will play Winthrop at Winthrop, while Whitman High will journey to Abington.

• • •

"ROLLO" FAGAN OF WALTHAM High is some player. Two touchdowns and a field goal don't a bad day's work. Fagan is not only one of the best high school ends, but he is also able to boot the pigskin hard. His punting in the Newton game was one of the best exhibitions of kicking ever given by a schoolboy.

• • •

HILLERY AND ANGUS ARE PUTting up a good game for Rindge. These boys will be a great help for the Technical School eleven against Somerville in the big annual "Turkey day" game.

• • •

CROSS COUNTRY RUNning should be taken up by the local high schools. A better, cleaner and healthier sport would be hard to find. Not only is it a great sport for track men, but it is one of the best ways for football and baseball players to keep in condition. Franklin Park is an excellent place for this sport, and it is convenient for the boys to get to and from. The out-of-town schools have taken up the hill-and-dale game in earnest, and have met with great success.

• • •

KEEP YOUR EYES ON LITTLE "Joe" Mackenzie, the English High back, in the coming games. This boy is a whirlwind and his playing all this season has been of the best.

• • •

RICHARDSON OF WALTHAM High is an offensive back that few can equal. Most of the elevens that have played the Watch City team have had great difficulty in stopping him.

• • •

EXETER REFRAINED FROM ANY boisterous celebration of the victory over Andover on account of the death of Dr. Amen. The boys willingly gave up their big event.

• • •

COACH "TAD" JONES OF EXETER deserves the lion's share of the credit for the overwhelming defeat of Andover. He certainly had a great aggregation under him.

• • •

SOMERVILLE HAS A GREAT PAIR in Captain Alex Anderson and Jim Robertson. Without these boys the team would present a hopeless looking spearance.

University of Texas Claims Title.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 11.—The University of Texas claims the Southwestern football championship for 1913, as a result of its 14 to 0 victory over the University of Oklahoma here.

YaleTeamShows Vast Improvement in Play

'Big Bill' Edwards Warns Tigers Not to Hold Yale Too Cheaply

By W. H. ("BIG BILL") EDWARDS.
One of Princeton's Most Famous Gridiron Heroes.

Princeton plays her last football game for the season of 1913 against Yale at New Haven next Saturday.

Yale has been held in high regard for her football ability. A study of gridiron records shows Yale's position to be an enviable one, and any one who thinks Yale will not show a good, strong team against Princeton is very much mistaken.

There has been a big improvement at the Yale field since the Colgate game, and the Yale team is in the Brown game shows much advance in team play. The spirit of Yale still lives, and that spirit has increased doubly since defeat.

There is not a man on the Yale team but what would give everything to defeat Princeton and Harvard, and any team that goes to New Haven expecting a walkover had better sit down and reason out some of these facts.

Consider Yale Strong.

As for Princeton, she expects to find Yale good and strong. Yale's physical condition is excellent, and the players are eager to square themselves in the final games with Princeton and Harvard.

Yale has been working on a few new plays, and this is true head work.

Yale has a good kicker and two good ends, and a fair centre. With this combination much can be done in the new game of football toward a successful ending.

Princeton is going to consider Yale as strong as the strongest team Yale ever had. This is wise, for the success of any team depends largely upon this spirit, and both teams stung by defeat will enter the game resolved to play their best.

Shea's Injury Costly.

Princeton started in light signal work to prepare for Saturday's game. It was unfortunate for Princeton that Shea was injured, for he will not participate in Saturday's game. Shea had promised to be one of the best ends in the country.

Yale is taking a big brace to beat Princeton, and nothing can be done to establish good, fast kicking Yale is liable to block some of Princeton's kicks.

The great success in the winning team of today is to work off plays for which there is no defence. Harvard's secrets in having four or five forwards smash into the man who starts to run with the ball is what Princeton will try to copy. There is nothing more discouraging to a man who runs with the ball than to be met and tackled fiercely by several forwards getting through.

Luck Against Yale.

Luck has been against Yale this year. Many men have been physically unable to play. Injuries have played an important part in Yale's hard luck, but it looks to me as though Yale was getting a team together which will play a creditable game. Ketcham has been changed to many times this season in is impossible to predict where he will play Saturday. I understand that as defensive back his work is excellent, and this position he plays on the defence.

Yale has evidently discovered a good quarterback in Wilson, and with the good kicking which Yale showed in the Brown game there is much for Yale to build on. Only two or three more weeks to get in better shape, and I would think her chances of winning against Princeton and Harvard.

The Yale-Princeton game promises to be a very hard, close fought game, with the advantage Princeton's favor.

Glen Warner Names Star Indian Eleven

CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 11.—As a football innovation the All-Time selections made by competent authorities are becoming popular, and withal, interesting.

Coach Glenn S. Warner of the Carlisle Indian School, having been asked to name an All-Time Carlisle team, made the following selections:

Ends—Albert Exendine, Edward Rodgers.
Tackles—Martin Wheelock, Emil Wauseka.
Guards—Henry Pierce, Charles Dillon.
Centre—William Gardner.
Quarterback—James Johnson.
Halfbacks—James Thorpe, Joseph Guyon.
Fullback—Peter Hauser.

A local authority on football, bearing the selection, gave the opinion that such an eleven could probably not only walk away with any football team that ever played, but was stronger by far than any all-time selection from any other college.

Dave Baker Elected to Lead Maine Team

ORONO, Me., Nov. 11.—David S. Baker, '15, of Carmunk, was unanimously elected captain of the University of Maine football team for 1914, at a banquet tendered the team by President Robert J. Aley in the training quarters. Baker has played centre on the varsity for three years and has been the all-Maine selection for the past two years.

He tied at Hebron Academy and was one of the "Hebron trio" with Sawyer and Gulliver, guards, which has played three years for Maine. Baker is also an outfielder on the baseball team and a member of the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity.

44,000 to See the Harvard-Yale Game

The applications for the big annual Harvard-Yale football game number 44,000. Of these 17,000 are from Yale and 27,000 from Harvard. According to an official announcement all applications will be honored.

Golf Notes

By H. P. FARRINGTON.

An interesting notice on the back of some of the cards furnished at various Canadian golf courses reads something like this: A ball on such and such holes may be considered in bounds, or out of bounds, at the discretion of the player.

• • •

This out of bounds rule may seem queer to the Americans who are in the habit of playing to the hard and fast rule which states that ball over a certain boundary on the different holes is out of bounds, unconditionally. The reason for this difference of the interpretation of the rule furnishes the answer, however. Throughout Canada log fences are to be seen instead of stone walls, and as they are built along a sort of V design a players' ball may be inside the fence but outside the protruding ends of the logs. Therefore, a ball in one of these V-shaped pockets is in bounds and not out of bounds in the same line and if the player wishes to play it, and has room to do so, he is at liberty to make his stroke, while if he is in an unplayable position in one of these pockets he may play his next shot as though the ball was out of bounds.

• • •

Quite a scare was occasioned in Alison Saturday by the rumor created and spread by some false alarmist to the effect that Tom Ashley had broken his neck in the Andover-Exeter game. T. A. Ashley, one of the low handicap men at Woodland, the father of the 122-pound football protege saw the game luckily, and telephoned home when he arrived back in Boston to let his wife know that the youngster was all right and had acquitted himself creditably.

• • •

Scores under 80 at this time of year at Brae Burn are exceptional but both W. E. Stiles and W. D. Smith were under this coveted mark Saturday in the handicap sweepstakes. The former was low gross with a 78, while the latter won low net honors with his Bandicap allowance of 8.

Dartmouth Eleven Prepares for Carlisle

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—The itinerant Dartmouth team resumed practice in preparation for another foray upon New York next Saturday, to meet the Carlisle Indians in what the coaches predict will be the hardest game of the year. The team will have spent its fourth successive week-end away from home, and in view of the severe faults developed in the Penn game the coaches are bewailing a schedule that allows them but one day's practice a week, or two times throughout the month. However they are making the best of matters by hustling the squad hard at work every day, without the customary Monday's rest.

Another consideration of the individual and collective misplays of the Penn game was followed by a long drill on forward pass formations.

The Dartmouth team fears Carlisle more than any other opponent of the year. Former Coach Bill Randall, '90, chief scout, enthuses over the Indians, and says they would beat Harvard, whom he has watched also, by a margin of two touchdowns.

FACULTY RULING MAY BAR YALE'S STAR PUNTER

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 11.—Carroll Knowles, Yale's star punter and fullback, will today know his fate as regards his eligibility in the remaining games on Yale's schedule. A faculty ruling is causing all the trouble.

Knowles prepared for college at Worcester Academy, and two years ago played on the Brown eleven. He entered Yale the next Fall, and remained out of football last year because the eligibility rule requires one year's residence. This Fall he has played in every game, and he is apparently immune from physical injury. His home is in Manchester, N. Y. If he retires his place will be taken by Guernsey, the freshman captain of last season.

If the Yale football coaches have anything definite in mind in lineup changes they have not ordered them as yet. Captain Ketcham said that Ainsworth will return to the squad today.

The positions of the Yale players were carefully explained in checking the Tiger attack, in a signal drill between the varsity and scrubs, the latter using Princeton formations, and the defence was so successful that the outline of the coaches who went to Princeton Saturday and saw the Yale-Princeton signals appears to be successful. Princeton has made only one touchdown on Yale's goal in fifteen years, and the coaches' defence for the Tiger attack this year is apparently as correct a diagnosis as ever.

Lyon Carter is back in uniform for the first time in two weeks, but unless Captain Ketcham decides to desert right end, Carter will not get back his old place.

RITCHIE BEATS CROSS BUT HAS TO FIGHT HARD

By DAMON RUNYON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—Two mighty tired young fighting men hung together [illegible] in the ring at the Manhattan Casino early this morning, and when the referee finally got the chin of the taller pugilist out of Madison Square Garden it left a smear of crimson on the white canvas.

It was a gory, yet wearily tough, battle that had been waged through the ten rounds with the two lads, Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion of the world, and Louis Cross pride of New York's lower East Side, at it with men knew they had come to fight.

Ritchie won, but his brows were done up in gauze and adhesive plaster, and his eyes had a worn expression that [illegible] of the great had undergone a terrific [illegible] the start of the [illegible]

Cross Fought Hard.

It is unlikely that the young champion will ever again have to fight ten such stormy rounds until that day arrives when he must pass the way of all champs.

Cross fought a great fight. There were even fleeting moments when the championship seemed within grasp. Master of long range punishing, the dark browed New Yorker carried the slender little Californian about through the early stages of the battle at a furious gait.

But he was meeting a thorough workman, a boy who as a real champion, and after the first few rounds the result was not greatly in doubt, barring the possibility of Cross getting home one of his random swings that seem to carry from his very heels.

Ritchie's Left Won for Him.

The champion's left hand won for him. He fought coolly and carefully, always measuring his blows with a rail splitter's axe, and he kept smashing Cross to the face with that left until he had a goodly share of blood running from the boy's nose and mouth.

In the third round he dropped Cross twice for the count but Louis came back, apparently strong and smiled his way through to safety and the bell.

In the second Cross dropped a crouch in front of Ritchie, as the Californian charged across and Willie shot into the [illegible] slippery body, falling face down and in his own corner, the referee [illegible] a holder.

Two 12-Round Bouts at Arena Tonight

Gallant to Battle Eagan. While Chick Will Clash with Lougherey

By JACK CONWAY.

THE dear old fight "final" will be in their element when two twelve-round bouts are staged at the Atlas A. A. this evening. Joe Eagan will exchange blows with Gilbert Gallant, while Joe Chick will try and convince the spectators that Frank Loughrey is not the greatest welterweight that ever took a rattler out of Philadelphia.

The Eagan and Gallant tussle has been billed well as the feature event, but there are many "fans" who will journey to the Arena to see Chick and Loughrey battle.

Eagan believes that his skill will take him to vanquish Gallant, but the Chelsea boy has a habit of springing surprises and he advances the information gratis that he will be well in the lead when the ten rounds at the end of the final round, provided that he does not land a dream wallop before the limit.

These two lightweights should put up an interesting contest. They have already met once. The "go" was staged in Gloucester and Gallant was awarded the decision. Eddie Mack, Eagan's manager, claimed at the time that the Peninsular boxer had the best of the going and should have been declared the winner. As this is a free country, every man has a right to his opinion.

The winner of this bout will hurl a challenge at Matty Baldwin. Both Eagan and Gallant believe that they are able to vanquish the Charlestown youth.

BOTH MEN TYPICAL FIGHTERS.

THE bout between Joe Chick and Loughrey should be a regular big league whirl, as both men are typical fighters.

Chick has made a fine record in the ring during the past year. He has won the majority of his bouts, while he showed to advantage in the two times in which he received draws.

The Gloucester welterweight is well known in Boston, as he fought two hard battles in this city against "Young" Jasper. The first "go" was declared a draw, while Chick gained the verdict in the second contest.

Two six round preliminaries have been arranged. Bob Brennan of Charlestown will meet Peter Brain of the North End, while Roy Smiley of Cambridge will clash with Jerry McAuliffe of Malden.

WALSH AFTER KILBANE.

JIMMY WALSH, the local bantamweight boxer, is taking things easy these days. Walsh has been a busy individual in the ring during the past month, having defeated Eddie Wallace, Joe Goldberg, Willie Jones and "Young" Cobbs.

Walsh is anxious to get another mixup with Johnny Kilbane. In discussing the matter today he said:

"I am confident that I am able to defeat Kilbane at 122 pounds at ringside. There is little chance of my meeting Kilbane in Southern California, as I have been barred on the Coast by Tom McCarey, the self appointed custodian of championship titles. I am ready to meet Kilbane at any club in the country and I believe that the public will stand back of me and see that I get a square deal."

FLANN'S BOXERS BUSY.

EDDY FLANN is a busy young man these days. He has enough boxers under his management to form a small sized army. The New Yorker is doing a little promoting, as the title, He is going to stage a show in Waterbury, Ct., on November 20.

Packey McFarland and Johnny "Kid" Alberts will meet in the feature event. These two men fought in Cleveland a little over a year ago and put up a fast ten round tussle. "Knockout" Sweeney of New York will exchange blows with Billy Allen of Waterbury, in the final contest. Allen has won seventeen straight bouts by a knockout, but will have a hard time to line Sweeney at bay. There will also be two six round preliminaries between local boys. "Dan Round" Allen will meet "Kid" Lewis, while Phil Walsh will try and send "Kid" Doran back to the bush league.

Flynn has matched Jack Fitzgerald to fight with Battling Levinsky at Brown's Gym., New York, on November 20, while Joe Fitzgerald is scheduled to fight Al McCoy at the Lenox A. C., Boston, on November 21. Jimmy Feasler, who is a member of Flynn's "stable," is signed to box "Young" Dyson before the Marlboro A. C. November 26. Flynn also writes that he is dickering for a match between Frankie Mack and either Tommy Murphy or Phil Bloom.

BALDWIN TRAINING AGAIN.

MATTY BALDWIN has started training early. The Dorker Hill lightweight was forced to lay off for over a week on account of injuries received while boxing with Al Waters, the amateur heavyweight. Matty informed the writer that Waters was the best heavyweight in New England. But that was before Al ran against Jim McLoughlin's pompom at the B. A. A. Saturday night. All of which causes us to remark that as a packer of champoose Matty is a swell little boxer fighter.

CROWLEY STAR PERFORMER.

JUDGING by the way that Mike Crowley of Malden is looking he should retain his title as New England and national 115 pound champion. Crowley is one of the most promising amateur boxers that the writer has seen in action for some time. He shapes up like a professional, possesses a smashing left hand punch and is as cool as the proverbial icicle when in a mix up. The amateur game could stand a few more boxers of Crowley's calibre.

RITCHIE REAL HEAD OF CLASS, ADMITS WELSH

By FREDDIE WELSH.

England's Lightweight Champion.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—The Ritchie-Cross fight was the best fight for ten rounds I ever saw in my life, and, incidentally, the best battle I have ever seen either man put up. It was a desperate contest from the first bell, and both men took enough hard rights on the jaw to have stopped any ordinary men.

The champion put up a real champion ship battle and showed wonderful gen eralship when he was hurt, and that was often. He is the only man I have seen fight Cross at his own game, exchanging rights with the dentist.

Outside of the knockdowns by Ritchie in the third round, in my opinion it was a very even affair. Both landed often and often, and I think it was an even exchange all through.

Ritchie came near ending the fight in the third round, when he dropped Cross with a short, snappy right after blinding the East Sider with his left glove.

Cross Near Knocked Out.

Cross went down in a heap and looked [illegible] on them, but he used headwork and when after he took the count. He settled, blocked and recovered enough strength to come back strong the remainder of the round, taking a heavy and exchanging blow for blow.

Ritchie was cool and never left himself too open at any time. It was always after Cross missed punches that he scored the hard-hit blows, especially his left hooks, but Ritchie's short arm rights were the best I ever saw. He surprised me with his clean punching, and very seldom did he miss.

When Cross covered, the champion ripped them to the body and got them far under enough to land clean. Ritchie, not being too familiar with the rules, pounded the kidneys in the fifth round, and later on used his elbow in the clinches, which brought hisses. These were the only times Ritchie fought foul, but they were not serious enough to disqualify him.

Weaken in Sixth.

The men showed weakness for the first time in the sixth round, after setting a terrific pace. It was a tough battle up to that time, both using their full strength. Ritchie's experience stood him good advantage in the closing rounds when he drove and side-stepped with ease.

His fight was a much better one than the one with Rivers on the coast. He looked more drilled in this bout and fought more like a real champion. In a longer battle I think Cross would have the advantage with his body wallop, providing Ritchie fought as hard.

But fighting for points Ritchie would probably win. It sure would be a wonderful fight if they ever met for twenty rounds.

The "Snood" Soft Pompadour The Aristocrat The Piquant Miss Wistful

THE eternal feminine question is: "How shall I do my hair?" Here are several very charming answers to it as given by five very charming types of girlhood. And all this and more, too, in the line of hints for hair dressing may be found in a little study of these beauties.

The pretty brunette on the left has tied her curly locks with a "snood," and then has massed her ringlets in a soft knot at the back.

Maiden number two has arranged her nut brown hair in a soft pompadour—the simplicity of which is most becoming to her clear-cut features.

The third girl is of the aristocratic type, and her parted auburn hair is softly waved and drawn over her ears in a fashion that well becomes her stately height.

The piquant little maiden who comes next parts her hair over the left temple and masses it in a great puff on top of her shapely head—so adding a few inches to her rounded figure's height—or apparent height.

And last we have the slender, wistful little lady who bands her hair low across her forehead and swirls it at the crown of her head to show the poise of her stately head.

Try one of these coiffures—for one of them is sure to approach in attractiveness the pretty girl who stands sponsor for her answer to the eternal question à la woman.

BUTTERFLIES

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

LITTLE girl that strayed away
While the sun shone bright,
Little girl that romped away
Hours of golden light,
Out across the daisy fields
In the drowsy noon,
Chasing butterflies all day,
Bedtime comes too soon.

Tired and weary little girl
In a snowy nest,
With a doll in either arm
Clasped against her breast;
Drowsy lids that flutter down,
Closing out the light,
Tired of chasing butterflies—
Dolls are friends at night.

Little girl that wandered out,
Secrets to unclose,
Started with the sun a-dream
On a bed of rose;
Out across the daisy fields,
Starred with youthful dreams,
Chasing butterflies all day
While the sunlight streams.

Little feet that wandered far,
Weary with the strife,
Tired of chasing butterflies
On the hills of life,
Wandered home again, too late,
Seeking childish joys,
Little hands that seeking found
Only broken toys.

My heart cries for a decision [illegible] her to come home; my [illegible] against it, and when one is [illegible] the head puts forward arguments [illegible] more convincing than those [illegible] heart. Then, moreover, I [illegible] never before, the rights of [illegible] eration.

Let us, you and I, forget our relations of employer and employe and spend the day in doing just what we would do if we were two girls, or two boys, together with a very little money to spend and a great many things we wanted to buy with it. Give me a vacation to forget what's troubling me."

So we said good-by to Richards, after seeing Manette off to school, and then took a street car down town. I had two dollars with me, and the pretty nurse had five cents. We took the car [illegible] the most adventurous [illegible] all the way. It was [illegible] rapidly, and [illegible] the prettiest [illegible] several men turn [illegible] admiration, and [illegible] heads for doing [illegible] suited their admiration [illegible]

At any rate, I distinctly [illegible] for catching my companion by the hand. I made a quick [illegible] for the car that was passing. [illegible] lifted her on and we were [illegible] on a direction directly opposite from that we had planned before she [illegible] her [illegible]

"Why, what's the reason?" she asked, somewhat breathlessly. "I wanted to go to the waxworks show, and here you are taking me away from it."

"I will take you back," somewhat savagely.

"But this ride means twenty cents more," she complained, "and we haven't had our ice cream or soda, and I am [illegible]"

"I didn't want to introduce a friend of mine to you," I explained. "I saw he wanted one when he started toward us."

"Am I not a fit person to meet your friends?" a little sarcastically.

"Entirely too fit," I replied, helping her off the car and starting back. "I won't have any other man admiring you [illegible] the reason."

"I thought," a little demurely, "that we started out to spend the day as if we were two girl or two boy chums?"

Poverty or Pride

A charity worker had on her list a woman whose husband was really very handsome, but lazy and inefficient. The family was in dire poverty when a chance to earn some money by carrying a load was offered to the man. The charity workers went to the man's house to tell him of his opportunity to learn to become a wage-earner at good pay. He was out, and his wife said to the proposition:

"Oh, ma'am, don't you think that he is really too handsome a man to be seen carrying a load? If it was floor-washing now, or bend water in a restaurant, it would be different. But for a handsome man like him to be carryin' a load, wouldn't it be a little—well, a little incongerous?"

What Heads Are For

The master of a village school was examining some boys on a piece of poetry which he had given them to prepare the night before.

They all said it excellently except one small boy at the bottom of the class. On being asked to say his lesson he said:

"I can't remember it, sir."

Master (in a rage)—Why, what's your head made for?

Boy—To put my hat on, sir.

Their Married Life

Helen Scorns a Taxi and is Sorry for It

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

THE rain was coming down in sheets, and the wind almost tore the umbrella from Helen's grasp.

"Oh, this is dreadful!" as she stepped in a swirling puddle, splashing the water up over her shoes. "I suppose we should have taken a taxi."

"If only it doesn't spot this suit," complained Louise, holding her clinging skirt above her ankles.

They had reached the corner now, but there was no car in sight.

"Let's stand under here," running to a sheltered doorway. "Oh, I hope it won't hurt your suit," apologetically, as Louise resentfully shook her wet skirt.

It seemed fully ten minutes before a car appeared—an embarrassing, awkward ten minutes for Helen, who felt responsible for this drenching, for she had stopped by to ask Louise for dinner, as Warren had phoned he could not get home and she hated to dine alone.

Louise Carson, who lived at a "woman's hotel," always welcomed a dinner invitation—even one that came at the last moment.

But as they left the hotel together, the rain that had threatened all day began in earnest. Perfunctorily Helen suggested a taxi, but with such evident repugnance that Louise murmured a polite, "Oh, we can just as well take a car."

"I'm afraid it's crowded," exclaimed Helen, as they now ran out to signal the approaching car.

The motorman, ignoring their signals, drove by without stopping, the car wheels splashing them with water from the rain-filled tracks.

"Oh, that makes me furious!"

IN THE CAR

The next car was just as crowded, but the motorman condescended to stop, and they squeezed their way through the wet, ill-smelling crowd.

"We shouldn't have taken this," complained Louise crossly, for to be crushed against wet overcoats and dripping umbrellas was even more damaging to one's clothes and temper than standing in the rain.

When they left the car they had to step out into a pool of water and almost wade across the street.

"Yes, a taxi would be cheaper than ruining our clothes," admitted Louise ungraciously, now plainly out of humor.

There was a sudden thundering crash, a streak of lightning—then a blinding sheet of rain.

Helen's thin silk umbrella was not proof against this downpour, and she felt the water trickling through it. She felt, too, the steady stream which poured from a point of Louise's umbrella over her shoulder, but by this time she was too wet and too desperate to care.

Silently, resentfully, miserably, they splashed through this torrent. The streets were deserted. Every one except themselves had sought shelter.

But Helen was too wretched even to feel indignant. At length the two globe lights before the apartment shone in a yellowish blur through the rain. The elevator boy looked mildly astonished as they entered, drenched and dripping.

"Oh, don't let's look at ourselves," pleaded Helen, as she caught a glimpse of her bedraggled hat and stringing hair in the elevator mirror.

The feather on Louise's hat was reduced to a dejected wisp, and her blue cloth suit was soaking to the knees.

HOME AT LAST

"Now let me have your coat," taking a hanger from her wardrobe; "and take your skirt off. I'll have Nora hang that in the kitchen."

But Louise's blue serge coat had faded through the lining on to her silk waist. There were blue smudges on the shoulder and sleeve.

"Take it off quick—I'll put it right to soak in cold water. It's all my fault. Oh, I can't tell you how sorry I am!"

If Helen hoped that Louise would comfort her with any protestations that it was "all right" she was disappointed, for Louise was anxiously examining the stained sleeve.

"And you must take off those wet shoes and stockings," warned Helen, "or you'll have a fearful cold. Here's a pair of stockings, but I'm afraid you can't wear my shoes." Then with a sudden inspiration. "Oh, would you mind Warren's house slippers—just until yours dry?"

In her anxiety about Louise's clothes, Helen had not thought of her own, but now she slipped out of her drenched garments.

"Can I serve the dinner, ma'am?" asked Nora, coming to the door.

"Yes, in just a minute." Then, turning to Louise, "Now what shall I give you to put on? Oh, I say—I've just the thing," taking out a pale rose silk negligee. "It's the one I got in Paris—I haven't worn it yet."

AT DINNER

"You'll have to hold it up. It's awfully long—I haven't had time to shorten it. Now we MUST go in to dinner or Nora will be furious."

They had just finished their salad, when there was a sound of a key in the hall door, and Warren strode in.

"Why, dear!" Helen threw down her napkin and ran to kiss him. "How did you get back so soon? Have you had any dinner?"

"Yes, had dinner on the train. We got through earlier than I thought and I caught the 5:30."

"You don't mean to say you were out in all that storm?" he demanded. "And you didn't take a taxi?"

"Oh, yes, I know, dear, we should have taken one, but when we started I didn't dream it would rain so hard."

Warren turned to Louise with an impatient shrug.

It is almost impossible to get Helen into a taxi. It's her pet economy. At the time we were in Paris—cheap as cabs are there—I don't think she ever took one unless I was with her.

Helen flushed, for she knew that Louise already thought she had been penurious about the cab.

Nora now served the coffee in the library and Helen left Louise to talk to Warren, while she looked after her clothes.

The skirt had dried on the radiator and Nora had pressed it to look like new. Almost all of the stains had come out of the shirtwaist, and Helen herself ironed it dry. Then she curled the bedraggled feather with a back of a paper cutter.

It was after 10 before Louise got out of Helen's negligee and into her own clothes.

WARREN GETS A TAXI

When she came back into the front room, drawing on her gloves, Warren rose quickly and went over to the 'phone.

"Hello! Get me a taxi, will you?" he ordered of the bellboy. "Yes, right away."

Was it still raining? Helen was almost certain that it had cleared off, but now she purposely refrained from looking out the window.

Louise had dined with them many times and Warren had never taken her home in a taxi. Often he only put her on the car at the corner. And now, unless it was really raining, Helen felt that his ordering of a cab could only be to annoy her—a sort of disciplining reproduction for an economy which, somehow, always irritated him.

In a few moments the cab was announced, and Helen went with them to the elevator. In spite of her effort to appear cordial and natural, she said good-by to Louise rather stiffly.

THE FAMILY CUPBOARD

A Story of High Society Life in New York

Adapted from the Dramatic Success by Owen Davis

You Can Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

THE opening scene is laid in the palatial home of Charles Nelson, whom the world calls a successful man. In reality Nelson's money has caused his wife to become a society leader, so that he gradually finds his home becoming more and more cheerless and less like a home. He enters his house to find his only son drunk and attempting the kiss Mary Burk, Mrs. Nelson's secretary. He upbraids the boy, who turns on his father and accuses him of maintaining another establishment uptown. Mrs. Nelson enters the room just in time to hear the accusation. Nelson confesses to her that the charge is true. Nelson leaves his house and moves to the Alpine Apartment Hotel. His daughter determines to follow him. He telephones to the Winthrops, some close friends, for help. Alice arrives at the hotel. She begs her father to take her with him, but he refuses and sends her to the Winthrops. Alice tells Tom Harding, her fiance, that their engagement is off temporarily. Mrs. Harding arranges to bring Mrs. Nelson to the Alpine Apartments. Nelson hears of this arrangement from Mrs. Harding, but declares his wife will probably refuse to see him.

He goes upstairs to await notification from Mrs. Harding concerning the decision of his wife. Mrs. Nelson arrives and Mrs. Harding's plan for reconciliation seems about to go through when Kitty Claire, the "other woman" in the case, walks into the hotel. Mrs. Nelson and she have words, and the wife leaves, vowing she will have nothing more to do with her husband. Kitty Claire tells the telephone operator she wants Mr. Nelson.

While Kitty Claire is waiting for Nelson to come down, her father, Jim Garrity, a chauffeur, comes in and says Dick Le Roy, who used to be the girl's partner on the vaudeville stage, is outside. Kitty sends for him and they are embracing when Nelson comes down stairs. She says that she is glad that their friendship has been found out because they won't have to keep it secret any longer. Nelson, however, has determined to end their friendship. He gives her some money and leaves her, but not until she has threatened revenge. She gets her chance when Nelson's son comes out of the elevator a few minutes later. She drops her pocketbook, and he, not knowing who she is, picks it up and opens conversation with her. It ends with them going out to lunch. In a few days the boy is infatuated with Kitty. At the end of a month Mrs. Nelson and Mary Burk, her companion, leave for the South. Kenneth goes to the station to see them depart. He gives some roses to Mary.

"Shall I, Mary?"

"Oh, Ken, if you would."

Ken Nelson's good angel stood at his elbow for a second, and then Fate sent a little cabaret tune jigging through his mind. Some one on the station platform was serenading a girl in the train. Ken remembered Kitty. He was to meet her at the Knickerbocker at 1 p. m.

"Oh, I'd come," he laughed easily. "I'd come—but I have a luncheon date!"

at Waterbury

(From Owen Davis' play now being presented in New York by William A. Brady.—Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.)

IN a week of sorrow her attitude had changed greatly toward the girl to whom she had once given warning that a Social Secretary must not also understand the boyish friendship of the son of the House of Nelson.

Ken was relieved. The farewell was not to be a tragic affair after all. No scene. Men hate scenes. He felt grateful to Mary. She was some girl, by Jove!

"Ten roses are like Mary. I'll wear one in my buttonhole—that is if Mary will put it there for me," said Ken, gently.

"Of course," said Mary, a little breathlessly. "And all day long we can be thinking we left a bit of your own thoughtfulness with you, Ken."

"But I hate to leave you, Ken. Do come," urged his mother.

"Shall I, Mary?

Ken Nelson's good angel stood at his elbow for a second, and then Fate sent a little cabaret tune jigging through his mind. Some one on the station platform was serenading a girl in the train. Ken remembered Kitty. He was to meet her at the Knickerbocker at one.

"Oh, I'd come," he laughed easily. "Clothes and toothbrushes and clean linen can be purchased on the train no doubt! It really wouldn't matter about my lack of trunk. I'd come—but I have a luncheon date!"

But when Ken kissed his mother goodbye he had to jog his memory to the tune of "You're sober, this time, my boy," for Mary's cheek was soft and warmly glowing pink, while the slim little hand she gave him in farewell was cool and white.

The train fled away to the Southlands, and Ken sped to Forty-second street. But a little fragrant memory of Mary Burk lingered in his heart—and in his buttonhole was the tiny tea rose her fingers had fastened there.

Over the lunch table and over the rim of a glass of champagne Kitty's eyes gleamed a challenge.

"So you take me to luncheon and wear little white rosebuds to show Kitty May what a divil ye are wid the ladies."

Ken looked at the rosebud uneasily. Somehow he wished Kitty wouldn't "It's pink—at the heart," said he, stupidly thinking aloud.

"Prove it," cried Kitty.

Surely, and with conscious power, Kitty was lightening her hold on Kenneth. She was fostering his infatuation. She was speeding the triumphant day of power—the day when Charles Nelson's son should love the woman his father had cast aside.

It seemed natural enough to Ken, when all other ties were cut, to take rooms in the downtown apartment hotel, where Kitty and her chauffeur, Jim Garrity, were established.

It was all perfectly proper.

At least it all looked perfectly proper to Ken. And it was living!

There were long, sunshiny days of luncheons and rides and teas and merry-making with pretty Kitty by his side.

There were delicious evenings of wine and song—and woman. Those evenings meant Kitty in his arms! To the whirling music of the cabarets they danced. Fast—with the mad whirl of the Dervish; or slow—with languorous suggestion of the Nautch girl, they circled in the dance.

About them heavy perfume, rich colors, exotic music and magnetic women. All around gleam and glow and an atmosphere to lure and stimulate the senses, and as he drowned along at the call of the dance Ken held a slim, vibrant slip of a girl in his arms.

It was a merry tune—and Kenneth Nelson would pay the piper.

He would pay—for Kitty's car and for her dainty little suite, for the privilege of knowing Mr. Dick Le Roy, and for the ex-cabman's masquerade as his own daughter's chauffeur.

But, most of all, he would pay for the bitter fact that Kitty Claire had come into his father's life—and gone out—as Kitty May!

But there was a clean, decent strain deep in the boy's nature. At the end of a month he had not guessed what an older, bolder man would have known at the end of an hour. At the end of a month the boy who had insulted Mary Burk with a drunken kiss while she was under the protection of his own roof was respectfully bidding Kitty May good night at the door of an apartment just across the hall from his own quarters. Again he was drunk; but with the manners of a Chesterfield he bade good night to the girl to whom a drunken kiss would have been a lark, not an insult.

Kitty's witchery of him was deeper than the mastery of the drink to which he had given himself. But as soon as her influence was removed, weariness and liquor had their sway. Silk hat, dressoout, patent leather pumps, pleated shirt, tie, watch, coins, billfold and cigarette case all formed a seductive on the floor of his crimson-walled living room, and three minutes after he had said a torturingly respectful "good night" to Kitty Kenneth was fast asleep in nine hours of heavy, drunken oblivion. Nine hours of log-like slumber. And then a voice forced Kenneth back to consciousness.

"Mr. Kenneth! Mr. Kenneth!"

"Hello!" muttered the waking prodigal.

"Hello, Potter!" he reproached. "Why did you wake me so soon?"

"Good morning, sir," said Potter, who had been deposed from his lofty estate as butler in the Nelson household, because there was no Nelson household—and who was now caretaker in chief to Mr. Kenneth, for whom there was no caring.

"It is 12 o'clock, Mr. Kenneth."

Kenneth rested a trembling hand on an aching head.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

The other day a bootblack was putting away at the end of a cigar when a gentleman, thinking to have a little fun at the boy's expense, asked him if he always smoked cigars.

"Wot brand do you generally smoke?" asked the gentleman.

"Robinson Crusoe, sir," replied the boy.

"I never heard of that brand," he said.

"It's a name I've given 'em myself," announced the boy. "You see, guvnor, old Crusoe was a castaway."

Weak Lungs Often Lead to Serious Illness

If you have weak lungs, you are generally subject to colds or throat trouble and easily susceptible to serious Lung Trouble. In many cases pneumonia or bronchial troubles leave the Lungs in a much weakened condition. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for the throat and lungs which has been found to be very beneficial, even when a change of climate and other treatments failed to bring relief. Read of this case:—

231 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen:—I was all run down in health and a severe cold which settled on my lungs. At last I began to raise sputum, and my spirits left me. I told me I must go to California before winter. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and took the Alterative. In a few days I felt better. In October I began to recover, and the next week in January, 1906, I resumed my regular occupation, having gained 25 pounds. I am restored to health. It is now seven years since my recovery has been complete, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly."

Physician Tells How To Grow Hair

A well-known physician who has made a careful study of the hair recently made the following statement: "It is comparatively easy to stop the hair from falling out, promote its growth and banish dandruff by the following simple recipe, which can be made at home: To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply it to the scalp with the finger tips two or three times per week. It not only is excellent as a scalp and hair tonic, but it darkens faded, streaked, gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. I use it myself and have no hesitancy in recommending it to my patients. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost." —Adv.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Hilbert Tells of Her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Fleetwood, Pa. — "During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do. One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—MRS. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, specks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, should be promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1908, by Edward J. Clode.

DID ever woman invent more taxing question than that confounding one? What was a blue atom? No doubt, creation's scheme included blue atoms, as well as black ones and red ones. But why this preference to say particular atom? He tried the words in every possible variety of combination. BLUE ATOM. They became more inexplicable.

In one respect they were effective. They spoiled his dinner. He had striven manfully against every possible form of surprise, but he was forced to admit that during the next three days he must succeed in persuading Evelyn Atherley that Philip Anson was alive and engaged in important matters in Yorkshire. That was imperative—was his scheme to be wrecked by a blue atom?

A WAY OUT

Moreover, her query must be answered. He promise to write was, of course, a mere device. It would be manifestly absurd to send her a typewritten letter, and, excellently as he could copy Philip's signature, he dared not put his skill as a forger to the test of inditing a letter to her, no matter how brief. Finally he hit upon a compromise. He wired:

Stupid of me to omit address. Your concluding sentence mixed up in transmission. Meaning not quite clear. Am feeling so lonely.

PHILIP.

Then he tried to resume his dinner, but his appetite was gone.

In postal facilities, owing to its position on a main line, York is well served from London. At 9 p. m. two letters, one a bulky package and registered, reached him.

The letter was from Mr. Abingdon. It briefly acknowledged his telegram, stated that a man in the Athenæum, who knew Sir Philip Morland, had informed him, in response to guarded inquiries, that the latest was exceedingly well off, and called attention to some important issues inclosed which required his signature.

The other note was from Evelyn. It was tender and loving, and contained a reference that added to the mystification of her telegram.

"In the hurry of your departure yesterday," she wrote, "we forget to mention Blue Atom. What is your opinion? The price is high, certainly, but, then, picture the joy of it—the only one in the world!"

And, again, came another message.

"I referred to Blue Atom, of course. What did the postoffice make it into? Evelyn."

Blue Atom was assumed immeasurable dimensions. He cursed the thing fiercely. It was high priced, a lot, alone in solitary glory. What could it be?

He strolled into the station, and ordered a telegram, using a code phrase form inspector.

"By the way," he said, casually, "have you ever heard of anything called a blue atom?"

The man grinned. "Is that another name for D. T.'s, sir?"

Grenier gave it up, and resolved to postpone a decision until the next morning.

By a late train Philip's portmanteau arrived. It was locked, and the key reposed in the safe. Green, it ultimately transpired, solemnly opened the safe in the presence of the housekeeper and the butler, locked it again without disturbing any of the other contents, and handed the key to the butler, who placed it in the silver pantry.

In the solitude of his room, Grenier burst the lock. The rascal received one of the greatest shocks of his life when he examined the contents—a quantity of old clothing, some worn boots, a suit of tweeds, a bed sweater, a big, tom key, a few tattered letters, and a variety of odds and ends that would have found no owner in a respectable rag shop.

He burst into a fit of hysterical laughter.

"A castle and little dukes!" he cried. "What a treasure! The Clerkenwell suit, I suppose, and a woman's shirt and blouse. Old clothes, too, by their style. His mother's relics. He must have been fond of his mother."

At that moment Jacky Mason, bustling, frowsy and inquisitive, was reading a letter which contained his lodging two or three hours before his arrival, in an envelope bearing the London initials H. H. M. S.

It was from the Scotland Yard Police Station.

Sir: Kindly make it convenient to attend here tomorrow evening at 8 p. m. sharp. Yours truly,

T. BRADLEY, Inspector.

The following day it was Mason's duty to report himself under his license of lease, but he was quite unusual for the police to give a preliminary warning of this nature, unless on his part meant arrest. That was all the officials looked after.

"What's up now?" he muttered. "Another wife-beater we didn't. This gives me a cast-iron alibi. I'll acknowledge it at once."

His accomplice, hoping to obtain sleep from champagne, consumed the contents of a small bottle in his bedroom, while he scanned the columns of the local evening papers for any reference to a "Seattle Mystery" on the Yorkshire coast.

There was none. Anson's body had not been recovered yet.

THE WATCH

Before going to bed he wound Philip's watch. He examined it now with greater interest than he had bestowed on it hitherto.

Although silver, it appeared to be a good one. He opened the case to examine the works. Inside there was an inscription.

"Presented to Philip Anson, aged fifteen years, by the officers and men of the Whitechapel Division of the Metropolitan Police as a token of their admiration for his bravery in assisting to arrest a notorious burglar."

Beneath was the date of Mason's capture.

"Where was I ten years ago?" he mused.

He looked back through the soiled leaves of a useful record, and found that he was then acting in a melodrama entitled "The Wages of Sin."

And the wages of sin is death! The drama insisted on the full measure of dingo and deity.

His signature had been accepted without demur. He could convict an enormous sum without question. Those were the entrancing certitudes which dazzled his precipice for a time.

But it was horribly annoying that a millionaire should have his current account on view, and the prevailing paragraph held a bogey, not wholly unforeseen, but baneful large when it actually presented itself.

The memorandum in Philip's hand-writing on Evelyn's letter was of the first preciousness. He hurriedly scrutinized it. Most of it was commonplace to practice the week.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles.—S. S. S.

The word Medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties that are necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known medicine S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily meals.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own special nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming Rheumatism, Catarrh of the Stomach and intestines, skin eruptions and all blood troubles.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause sore throat, weak eyes, loss of strength, pain, aches and that all-overishness of muscle and nerve that drives so many people into the dangerous path of stimulants and narcotics.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 219 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient medical department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may consult freely.

Business and Financial

Latest in Today's Stock Markets

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong and the market steady this afternoon, the improvement noted at the start being maintained. New Haven was in more demand after Judge Sheldon of the Massachusetts Supreme Court refused an injunction to prevent the road from issuing $67,000,000 in debenture bonds.

Early in the afternoon in Boston, New Haven rose 1¼, and Boston & Maine 2½. United Fruit had recovered 1¼ from a point higher. American Telephone had advanced ⅝. Most active mines were fractionally higher.

Early Trading in New York.

At the opening of the New York market prices ranged higher, Union Pacific leading the rise. Loan crowd transactions after the close on Monday indicated that an oversold situation had again developed, for after business men had left many of stocks were still wanted for delivery in day. The supply was much scanty, in fact, at the opening. The tone on this side was strengthened by the improvement in London, where American rails rose above New York parity. Foreigners were interested by reports of over-night developments concerning Mexico and deemed that immediate intervention was no longer probable. The London contango was 5 per cent, and business was light on the carryover.

In New York the improved situation was largely due to reports from Washington and from Europe—and a little of The "war scare" had lost its force with stock traders. Pennsylvania was one of the standard investment stocks to show improvement. It was in more demand than for some time. One dispatch from the big road's head was from a conservative operator went so far as to express the opinion that Monday, November 10, would be the low day of the present season. He thought prices would be substantially higher before the end of the year.

The decision regarding the pay of conductors and trainmen in the East did not affect the market adversely, although it will cost roads $6,000,000 more a year in operating expenses. It had been expected that employes would be awarded an increase of pay, and as they did not get all they wanted the award was regarded as a compromise. It also was deemed another strong argument for roads with the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase in rates.

Coppers Showed Improvement.

The market was strong all the morning and during the noon period. By afternoon prices averaged nearly a point above the opening level. Coppers benefited by the advance in the London warrants market, which gained over £5 per ton from the effects of the recent bear drives. But although copper shares sold higher and were in more request there was no great demand for metal.

Rising by consumers was said to be very limited and confined to dealings with small concerns who have been cutting under the price asked by the leading agencies. It is said that dealers were offering electrolytic in London this morning at 74½ cents a pound. The large agencies there were standing firm for 13½ cents. Metal was offered in New York by second hands at 16 cents or under.

There have been, it is stated, some inquiries recently by large consumers, but this is said the concessions which producers have been able to glean from the situation. They claim the supply is so limited that they will command their price in the end.

Trading Soon Grew Dull.

Trading was fairly active in the first hour, but the market was dull in the last half of the forenoon and no better in that respect at midday. Brokers said that the demand for Union Pacific was from strong sources and indicated accumulation in anticipation of the coming dividend declaration. Steel was well supported and was also said to have a request from potent interests, despite prospects of decreased earnings.

There was no change in the money situation, the call rate ranging from 2½ to 4 per cent. during the session. Time rates did not vary from yesterday's quotations. There was nothing new reported from Washington regarding the currency situation. Interest centred upon the Democratic caucus to be held tomorrow.

Financial News in Brief.

At the morning session of the London copper warrants market spot advanced 17s 6d and futures 15s. At the close spot had advanced 7s 6d and futures 10s more. Sales were 900 tons of spot and 1,900 tons of futures.

Since the first of this year the tonnage of the United States steel corporation has declined 3,418,597 tons, or an average of 341,860 tons a month. A sharp falling off in new business in the latter part of October was the most unpleasant feature of the statement, and it is understood that thus far in November new bookings have shown no indication of improvement.

According to the government estimate, the corn crop of the United States for 1913, although above 500,000,000 bushels below last year's record output, will be the most valuable ever produced. It will be worth $1,741,355,019, against $1,520,454,000 in 1912.

Big Consolidated's net earnings for the September quarter show a gain of 10,372 over those for the corresponding 1912 period.

For the year ending with September, compared with the previous fourteen months, American Linseed Company's net earnings increased $923,255.

The American Sugar Refining Company has declared a regular quarterly of 1¾ per cent., both on preferred and common stocks, payable January 2 to stockholders of record December.

Observations on Our Currency Needs

By BOERSIANER.

According to Bradstreet's Agency, there were 115 more failures in October than in September, and the total liabilities disclose the highest commercial mortality since January. This figures, again according to Bradstreet's, "reflect in a considerable degree high rates for money and conservatism in granting credit."

In plainer terms, if time funds had not ruled in most cases at the law's limitation, and if bankers could have seen their way to some sort of liberality, some, if not many, firms might have been rescued from bankruptcy.

No doubt. But there is nothing new in the "might have been." In every critical and semi-critical month of the year, and in every storm and stress period since 1837, many a disaster might have been forestalled if American bankers were not confronted with a loose, free-for-all, wholly evil pell mell banking system. The American banker takes enough chances as it is.

Were France or England or Germany, or any highly civilized community wisely ruled than America is cursed with the American want of currency system, there would not be occasion, it would be chronic. Conversely, if America had the wise control of France or England or Germany collective catastrophes would be unstated.

A curious American economist came over here some years ago to study, at first hand, a banking arrangement which, to him, had appeared impossible of possibility. On boarding the return steamship he was asked by a belated reporter of a slow newspaper what he thought of America.

"Some Europeans see all things in God, and the American in the dollar," was the malicious reply. He sneered, of course, that whatever originated in America must be evil to the American, no matter how intrinsically bad it might be.

Unquestionably much of the lay opposition to a central bank is rooted in the fact that the institution is European and that it raises its head "in America," was the malicious reply. He sneered, of course, that whatever originated in America must be evil to the American, no matter how intrinsically bad it might be.

* * *

Unquestionably much of the lay opposition to a central bank is rooted in the fact that the institution is European and that it raises its head "in America," was the malicious reply. He sneered, of course, that whatever originated in America must be evil to the American, no matter how intrinsically bad it might be.

* * *

Irrespective of these prejudicial obstacles the American of 1791-1811 and of 1817-1837, the respective dates of fitful lives of the first and of the second United States Bank, is not the American of 1913. Commercially and financially the nation has long outgrown these dates. And a political transformation has taken place within a quarter of a century.

It is only recently, as time is reckoned in the history of nations, that civil service has been established in the United States. For years after the law was passed it was ruthlessly broken. Now it is a precedent and campaign the male employes of the post-office, old and young, are put to work to the street cry "veterans" in favor of this or that candidate.

It is only recently, if not impossible now, and this is one of several reasons why a central bank would not meet the fate of the established banks of Madison and the Jackson periods. Another is that the majority of bankers want no improve of one central bank, as distinguished from the dozen central banks contained in the Owen-Glass bill.

* * *

Lay disapproval may be dispelled by plainly demonstrating the benefits, but the necessities of a central institution. In the early part of next year there will be submitted some of the imperative advantages of such a bank, and those will be presented in plain, non-technical terms.

To condemn a thing out of hand because it is European is cheap and foolish chauvinism. Originality in individuals is a curse rather than a blessing. The conviction that Satan himself was a praiseworthy object compared with those neutral angels who were neither faithful nor rebellious, who had neither initiative nor character, was a part with the times. But the adoption of benefi cent systems, of beneficial inventions, no matter how they originate or whence they come, is a duty, not a humiliation.

Besides, it is a comfort to remember that Europe is not to America for more fiscal and commercial ideas than America will ever get from Europe.

Lawson's Son Pays $25 in Auto Fines

Before Cambridge Judge on Two Violations of Law.

Douglas Lawson, son of Thomas W. Lawson, was in the Cambridge court today charged with two violations of the automobile laws. He gave his address as No. 34 State street, which is the office of Thomas W. Lawson. Policeman Andrew Conlan said Lawson did not slow down and give a proper signal when passing a crossing, and that he was operating a machine without a license.

Judge Almy imposed a $5 fine on the first charge and a $20 on the second. Mr. Lawson paid.

IGNORE CHARGE OF CRUELTY TO THE INSANE

The State Board of Insanity will ignore the charges made against attendants at the Westboro Insane Hospital by W. E. English, who was a patient at that institution for three years, unless formally presented to the board. The announcement was made today by Dr. Thomas, executive officer of the insanity board.

The startling charges made by English were printed exclusively in last night's AMERICAN.

Mr. English charged:

That patients are kicked in the abdomen while strapped in bed simply because they are too noisy.

That patients are forcibly fed until their noses bleed.

That patients are often "kneed" by attendants while being forcibly fed.

That sick patients are forced to work with pick and shovel.

That patients are "wetpacked" until they are too weak to stand.

That attendants are often "in liquor" and often provoke patients to fight.

Refuse Writ to Stop New Haven Bonds

Bulkeley's Counsel Appeals to Full Bench from Judge's Decision.

Judge Sheldon in the Supreme Court today refused the petition of former Governor Bulkeley of Connecticut and others asking for an injunction restraining the New Haven Railroad from issuing its $67,000,000 worth of bonds approved by the Public Service Commission.

Former Mayor Nathan Matthews, representing Bulkeley and the other plaintiffs, appealed the case to the full bench of the Supreme Court.

Judge Sheldon declared that under the issue the public welfare is not involved and that the public is not compelled to take the bonds. He gave his decision from the bench.

Jersey Boniface Didn't Know Bryan

Fame of Nebraskan Given a Rude Shock in Perth Amboy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Senator Key Pittman of Nevada motored from New York to Washington just before the elections last week to support John Lee Slight at Perth Amboy, N. J., where Secretary of State Bryan was scheduled to speak.

"You like to see Mr. Bryan," Senator Pittman said to the clerk of the hotel.

The clerk ran his eye over the register, "Nobody of that name registered here," he replied. "I don't know the gent, but he may be getting around with Judge Lee in the cafe. I will have him paged for you."

"Never mind. Good night," the Senator from Nevada replied.

Attack Caucus on Speakership

The campaign committee for Representative Benjamin F. Haines of Medford, who is out for the speakership of next year's House as a Republican in a progressive endorsement, today issued a statement attacking the Republican State machine and its efforts to bring about a party caucus on the speakership.

This is the first open declaration of opposition to a caucus that has come from the camp of any candidate for speaker. One of the Republican candidates for president of the Senate is opposed to a caucus and it was declared in Republican circles today that if a caucus be forced upon the Republican members by the machine that some of the members will bolt.

Tells New Way to Convert the Heathen

"Find Good in Them and Their Belief," Says Dr. Eliot.

Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot of Cambridge, speaking today at the Unitarian missionary conference in Channing Hall, suggested a new way for converting the heathen.

"Our effete dogmas are incomprehensible to the Japanese and Chinese, for instance," declared Dr. Eliot. "Don't search for defects in the heathen, but try to find good in them and build your systems of belief. This is the new way to convert them."

Melrose Men to Fix 'Biddy's' Fate

Referendum to Settle Much Mooted Question, "Why Is a Hen."

Those Melrose hens are causing trouble again.

What they have done in the past would fill several volumes of the latest dictionary and unabridged encyclopedia and written deep into Melrose history are their many antics.

On the second day of next December, when Mr. Voter (Mr. Voter, not Mrs. Voter) marks his ballot for mayor and aldermen and the school committee, and the granting of liquor licenses in the strongest temperance town in the State, he is going to vote on this most important of all questions:

SHALL THE KEEPING OF FOWL BE REGULATED BY ORDINANCE?

By unanimous vote last evening the Melrose aldermen decided to place the question on the city election ballot. The campaign for and against the hen is waging hot and promises to rival any mayoralty or gubernatorial fight ever held.

A Government Central Bank Is a Good Democratic Ideal

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff has conferred a distinct service by his speech in regard to currency legislation. One does not have to agree with him in every point to appreciate the value and the illuminating character of his utterances. Mr. Schiff's speech can hardly be considered alarmist. The points that he makes are:

First, that the currency legislation before Congress ought to be completed as speedily as may be, since delay means uncertainty, and uncertainty is always a disturbing influence in the business world;

Second, that, despite the desirability of a prompt conclusion of the currency question, nevertheless sufficient time should be taken to make the new currency measure absolutely sound and effective;

Third, that too protracted deliberation over the currency measure, and too prolonged uncertainty as to what business conditions would be as a result of the currency measure, would probably bring about a business stagnation and a lack of confidence which would result in business depression sufficiently aggravated to be pronounced a panic;

Fourth, that the present Administration measure is a modification of the Aldrich bill, and, to a large extent, the product of the Monetary Commission, of which Senator Aldrich was the head, and that, therefore, he, Mr. Schiff and other representatives of the great Wall Street interests could find less danger in the prompt passage of the Administration bill than in the delay and the possible failure to pass it.

If the above is a correct analysis of Mr. Schiff's speech, how can any one criticise his remarks, even if they do not wholly agree with his conclusions?

Undoubtedly and indisputably, the prompt passage of a correct currency bill is as desirable as was the prompt passage of a correct tariff measure. The continual and protracted disturbance of business does cause business depression, and sufficient business dullness and financial depression have already been caused by the didactic doctrines and theories of the present pedagogic Administration.

Obviously, however, enough time must be given to deliberate discussion and deliberation over this currency measure to prevent a serious mistake being made, similar to the mistake made in the tariff measure.

The country should not be rushed into a measure which is undemocratic in principle and which will not inure to the benefit of the people, as we were rushed into a measure of tariff reduction which opened our markets to the products of foreign countries without opening foreign markets to the products of our country.

Certainly, for instance, we do not wish to see the country hurried into the adoption of a merely modified Aldrich measure. The people of this country expressed with sufficient emphasis their doubt and disapproval of the Aldrich provisions and the Aldrich intentions.

No matter how honest the purposes of the present builders of the Administration bill, it is doubtful if a merely reconstructed Aldrich bill will sufficiently satisfy the requirements of the situation or the demands of the progressive elements of the country.

If Mr. Schiff is right, and he apparently is right, in stating that the Administration bill is merely an outgrowth of the Aldrich recommendations, would it not be better for this presumptively progressive Administration to start from another foundation, and not merely remodel their structure, but construct a new financial measure from the ground up?

Would it not be better to proceed along the lines of the suggestion of Mr. Vanderlip? Would it not be better to adopt the judicially radical suggestion of the Independence party platform, adopted at Chicago in 1908 and reading:

"The Independence party declares that the right to issue money is inherent in the Government, AND IT FAVORS THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A CENTRAL GOVERNMENT BANK through which the money so issued shall be put into general circulation."

The soundest and most advanced progressive thought of this country has long been in favor of a central, Government-controlled bank. The established principle and practice of the great Republic of France is expressed in the form of the Bank of France, a central, Government-controlled bank.

The most thorough and thoughtful, and yet the most advanced, opinion in Germany finds expression in the Reichsbank of Berlin, a central, Government-controlled bank.

The plan is practical, because it is in successful operation in other great and up-to-date nations.

It is democratic and progressive, and in accordance with our American ideas and institutions.

A democratic and progressive administration should favor the idea of a central, Government-controlled bank, and a practical business administration of this Government should adopt this plan, especially when the plan has the support not only of the people at large, who will be benefited by it, but of such great bankers as Mr. Vanderlip, who recognize the practicability of this plan and its essential soundness and value.

Mr. Schiff is right when he states that unnecessary delay is dangerous, but he is wrong, as far as the popular interest and inclination are concerned, when he advocates the adoption of the modified Aldrich measure.

Mr. Schiff and Mr. Vanderlip should unite in their support of a truly democratic proposition of a central, Government-controlled bank, conducted not by any clique in the interest of any class, but by the Government in the interest of all classes in all sections of the country.

BEILIS ACQUITTED

Russia Plays the Part of Cruel Coward, Lacking the Courage to Commit Official Murder

Lacking courage to MURDER directly and officially ONE JEW, Russia conspired to cause the murder of thousands in an infamous, cowardly "Judicial" decision.

That, at least, the protest of civilized humanity has succeeded in accomplishing.

It was intended, and carefully planned, that the poor, friendless, defenceless Jewish workman should be executed under the charge of the most frightful and revolting blood guilt.

And he would have been convicted and officially murdered without doubt had not civilization in better lands cried against the outrage and awakened in official Russia the one thing that Russia fears—THE CONTEMPT OF CIVILIZATION.

Beilis is acquitted and will be freed and for that all good men and women will be fervently thankful.

His judicial murder would have been a horrible outrage, not only a crime against him as an individual, but a crime against his race and his religion.

For the Russian idea was to murder him and with him murder the good name of all the Jews, and to increase the official endorsement of a vile slander, the bitter hatred and cruel persecution already existing.

But the intended official crime was stopped by public protest. Russian brutality, that has committed so many murders, fomented so many pogroms, lacked the courage to proceed before the eyes of the world with the official killing of ONE individual Jew.

Beilis escapes from the paw of Russia and that brutal beast, in this one case at least, retires growling and baffled.

Unfortunately, however, the government that did not dare to murder officially this individual Jew, Beilis, has done as much as it could and as much as it dared to murder the reputation of Jews throughout the empire and to increase the hatred in which the Jews are held by the ignorant, drunken Russians and to add fuel to the flame of persecution and outrage.

The verdict which declares Beilis innocent—because Russia did not dare to execute him—declares also that the murder of which he was accused was "a ritual murder," that is to say, the Russian government in this infamous decision seeks to put upon all the Jews and their religion responsibility for the murder charged against Beilis.

The statement is officially made by the court, which did not dare to murder the accused individual Jew, that the Jewish religion was responsible for the murder of Yushinsky, that the blood had been shed to be used by Jews in their religious ceremonies.

Seven centuries ago Pope Innocent IV. denounced the infamous lie. And over and over the vile accusation brought to excuse the torture and robbery of the Jews has been disproved.

It is to be hoped, and we may believe, that the civilized world has heard of the last infamous charge of this kind in a court of law.

Russia, in the face of civilization, has not dared to murder the innocent Jew accused of a crime that he has never committed. And if Russia has not dared this time, she will not dare in the future, we may believe.

Unhappily, in Russia, at least, many Jews must suffer because of this infamous Beilis case.

The Russian Black Hundred, the official haters and perjurors of the Jews, have been cheated of their individual victim. They are not to have the satisfaction of murdering Beilis.

But the ignorant peasants will be told that the crime was committed by Jews unknown and many will suffer.

However, the plans of the Russian government have been thwarted. The desperate effort to convict Beilis, backed by perjury, conspiracy and cunning, has failed. Every man who has helped to protect that far-off, feeble, defenceless workingman, Beilis, from the bloody creatures thirsting for his blood must feel deeply grateful for the privilege of having said a word in defence of human decency.

The American Israelite, in its issue of October 30th, says:

"The foremost among those who unsparingly denounced the Czar and his advisers and Russian officialdom for seeking to stigmatize their Jewish subjects as guilty of ritual murder, have been the various Hearst papers in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and elsewhere. They have not hesitated to speak out plainly and forcibly, and if what the various editors have been saying has no effect in Russia—as it probably will not—still they will have served a purpose, by calling the attention of a large number of reading and thinking people to the brutal wrong which is being done at Kiev. William Randolph Hearst is entitled to the gratitude of all right-thinking men."

This expression of thanks is appreciated, but it should be extended to many newspapers, to many organizations and to many individuals. For the protest against the proposed brutality has been world-wide and it must surely have been heard had not the Hearst newspapers, early in the day and with such energy as they possessed, taken up the crusade.

Flirting — The Flirting Woman Is Peculiar to America; Abroad She Is Regarded as of Light Character, and Even Here No Man Respects Her

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

THERE was a handsome Spaniard passing along a New York street; and he glanced, no doubt admiringly, at a beautiful woman, sitting in her carriage, before a shop entrance.

She screamed and ordered him out.

"But you smiled at me," the man said. "When a woman smiles at me, I think she likes me to sit beside her."

"You fool, I was only flirting," the woman retorted.

"I am a Spaniard, and we do not understand the word flirting," the man replied. "And I am no fool. The woman who flirts with a strange man is the fool."

The man was quite right.

Only in America is that type of woman found; the woman who claims to be respectable, and who in reality is not vicious; yet who, by her conduct in public places, and toward strangers, compels an observer to question her morality and respectability.

There are women who do not seem to know the fine distinction between a man's admiration and his curiosity to test her good sense. Such women not only encourage the attentions of strangers, but frequently boast of these attentions as a proof of their own powers to attract admiration.

The wife of a successful business man, and a woman possessed of every earthly blessing, a good man's love, a beautiful home, health and youth, was heard relating her experiences on a railroad journey.

A man had stared at her continually; finally he had walked past her two or three times; and at last had offered her a newspaper. She had accepted it; and the man had talked to her until she reached her destination. Again she had been followed on the street by a man for blocks; and still again a man had met her, and stared at her, and after she passed he had continued to stare.

"But how did you know," she was asked, "unless you turned and looked at him? It takes four eyes to make a stare objectionable."

Every decent-looking woman, under eighty years of age, is subjected to more or less of this experience on the streets of American cities. But if she conducts herself in a seemly and self-respecting manner, she will not be annoyed by its continuance.

No man will presume to address a woman who is traveling alone, if she does return his glances.

No man will follow a woman many blocks if she gives him no encouragement. Not unless he is a highwayman or a lunatic. If she refuses to look at him he will give up the chase finally.

There are many men of a cheap type who make advances to women in public places, without any cause. But if the advance is ignored or resented, it is not repeated.

Let no woman imagine she is possessed of peculiar or unusual attractions because she has these experiences.

And let her rest assured, if she responds in any way to the advances of strangers—of men to whom she has not been properly presented—that she will be regarded lightly by these men, and her name will be used by them in ways which would bring the blush to her cheek, could she listen.

Fathers, brothers, husbands, are always indignant when women of their own families are subjected to such attentions from strangers. Even when they are subjecting other women to such attentions.

It is a curious fact that most men have higher ideals for their daughters, sisters and wives than most women have for themselves. This is because women so frequently allow their vanity and self-conceit to blind their judgment.

Over in foreign lands (in all foreign lands), a woman who permits any man to show her the least attention in a public place (any stranger), at once brands herself as a woman of light character.

And that is what she is, here or anywhere in reality, even though she may be guilty of no immoral thought or act; yet she is so devoid of the finer instincts and attributes which make up worthy womanhood that she is lightweight in character.
